FAIRMONT STATE NORMAL.

Location.

The location of the Normal School in Fairmont offers opportunities and advantages not found in other schools. It being a railroad center, it is easily accessible to those desiring to enter from all the northern sections of the State. The City itself offers many advantages by way of entertainments, concerts and lectures. Perhaps no other city in the state offers so many first class attractions as Fairmont. All of these make a very valuable supplementary addition to the regular work of the school. The City Schools are also exceptional in quality. These are open to Normal School students for observation and study, thus giving those who attend good examples of good schools and good teaching. Fairmont is also a healthy city and, if reasonable care is exercised, there need be no fear concerning health. The work of the Normal School is also much enhanced by the co-operation of the various pastors, and by the business men of the City, who are ever ready to give their services in whatever way they may help. All of the above influences make Fairmont an ideal place for a Normal School.

NORMAL SCHOOL BUILDING

HISTORY OF THE FAIRMONT STATE NORMAL.

BY MRS. N. R. C. MORROW.

It is impossible in space so limited as that afforded in the catalogue to give more than a mere outline of the history of the Fairmont Normal School, and much therefore that would be vitally interesting must necessarily be omitted.

The early history of the school is given somewhat more in detail since that is less familiar to the great majority of the alumni than the more recent history, and therefore of greatest interest. For the information pertaining to those early years, the writer acknowledges her indebtedness to the Hon. B. L. Butcher, who almost from its beginning has been more or less closely identified with the school.

The Legislature of West Virginia, by Chapter 120 of the Acts of 1867, provided for the State Normal School at Marshall College, Huntington, and created a Board of Regents.

Dr. William R. White, of Fairmont, at that time State Superintendent of free schools, and previous to his election to that office, at the head of an academy in Fairmont, conceived the idea of asking for a branch of the Normal School to be established in Fairmont, and communicating this to his friends, among whom was ex-Governor A. B. Fleming, received their hearty support, and a charter was speedily obtained under the title, "The Regency of West Virginia Normal School."

By Chapter 123, Acts of 1867, an appropriation of $5,000 was secured from the State to be applied by said Regency in establishing a Normal School "for the purpose of educating and training teachers in the improved methods of instruction and discipline adopted in the common schools of other states."

By Chapter 146 of the Acts of 1868, the State Superintendent of schools was authorized to purchase of said Regency of West Virginia Normal School, its property at not more than $2,000, an additional appropriation of $3,000 to be made for the school after the purchase.

By act of the Legislature 1869, the Independent School District of Fairmont was authorized to place a part of the pupils of the district under the direction of teachers in the Normal School as a "Model School" to be taught in the Normal building. At that time the Normal School was conducted in a building on the corner where the Watson Hotel now stands, and known in the last few years of its existence as the Old Shot Tower.

Dr. W. R. White was the first principal, continuing as such until the fall of 1870, when he was succeeded by Prof. J. C. Gilchrist, who served one year, he in turn being succeeded by Dr. J. G. Blair, of Parkersburg, a former vice-president of the Ohio State University. Dr. Blair remained at the head of the school until his death in December, 1878.

However far the Normal School wandered in subsequent years from its original purpose—that of offering professional training for teachers—it is clear from the record that it set out with that in view. In the earliest published catalogue, that of 1873-4, we find two courses, viz: Elementary Normal Course and Professional Normal Course. The subjects scheduled under the latter were wholly professional, and sound quite modern.

No record, so far as found by the writer, explains when, or how, or why the Fairmont Normal ceased to be a training school for teacher and became merely an academic institution; but tradition says that opposition to the principal, Dr. Blair, growing out of partisan politics, was the cause of the disunion between the Normal School and the Public School.

The Board of Instruction for 1873-4, as the faculty was then called, contained seven members, one of whom, Miss Alice V. Hewes, was the music instructor. Other members of the Board of Instruction were Dr. Blair's assistant, Miss M. L. Dickey; Miss Lucy Fleming, sister of ex-Governor Fleming; Prof. Thos. C. Miller, Principal of the Academic Department; B. L. Butcher, Assistant in Academic Department. The catalogue states that classes in German and French were conducted, but does not state by whom.

The catalogue of 1875-76 reports its Board of Instructors

as consisting of Dr. J. G. Blair and Miss M. L. Dickey, with six assistant tutors, among whom are the names of Lee P. Watson, Miss Olive Zumbro, Jas. E. Mercer and Elias S. Amos.

By Chapter LXX, Acts of the Legislature 1872, an appropriation of $5,000 was made for a new building for the Normal at Fairmont, provided the Board of Education of Fairmont District would appropriate a like sum for the new building. This was done, and the present Second Ward school building was the new home of the Normal, and occupied for the first time in June, 1873.

For the very interesting history immediately following, the writer is indebted to the Hon. B. L. Butcher:—

“The spring term of 1872 brought a large number of new students, and the first graduating class was announced; and the first commencement in the history of the school was staged with good effect late in June of that year. This exercise was held in the Methodist Protestant Church, or the “Church on the hill,” as it was then called, which stood across the street from the school building, where the home of the late Colonel Clarence L. Smith now stands.

The Normal Literary Society had been organized during that school year, and during the spring term had gained greatly among the students, many of whom joined it. Its sessions were not open to visitors except by special invitation from a member, each of whom could invite one. It met each Saturday afternoon in the school building and was exclusively for the young men.

There had been generated among the students in the school, especially at the spring term, a very enthusiastic educational spirit and loyalty to the school and its teachers. Numerous pledges were made among the students to return for the fall term to complete the Normal course. A noticeable fact was that most of the students who attended the spring term were in fact teachers already, some of several years' experience; but feeling their lack of training and book knowledge, together with the desire for a diploma of graduation which would exempt them from examination, many of the best teachers in Marion and surrounding counties attended the Normal.

Sprinkled among these were representatives of many of the best families of the town and country, attending the school for college preparation.

The teachers, Dr. J. G. Blair, Miss M. L. Dickey and Mr. George M. Fleming, were most competent to instruct not only in English branches but Greek and Latin and higher mathematics.

School opened at 9 o'clock and closed at 4, with an hour for recess, but the teachers heard classes before school, after school, and after supper as well sometimes, besides giving a full day's work. They found most receptive soil and eager minds, and could not deny "the seed sowing" and "mental nectar" that stimulated and held the students with loyal hearts in love with the school.

Fairmont was then, as it had been described before, "a village on the side of a hill" half way between Clarksburg and Morgantown, but it had what few towns have had in "paying quantity," a most liberal and friendly disposition to those who came to the town, whether on business, as visitors, teachers or students. The people seemed to the students—country boys and girls—more like country people than any others they had ever met. The best homes were opened to them for room and board; and the social life of these families included the students in their homes, so that the students became acquainted with the families, the men and women of the community, and these families took personal interest in the school, and the students were their special concern, to be made to feel at home; and a desire to come back. So far as this good quality has been lost, the city, now on its "seven hills," has deteriorated in its fine home-like flavor" to the student on first acquaintance; but once the crust is broken, the same generous hospitality is found in abundance.

The fall term of 1872 brought back double the number of students of the spring term, with nearly all back who were in at that term. Dr. Blair and Miss Dickey again took charge, and had an assistant. Miss Laura Strader, of Jefferson County, who was added to the teaching force.

The Normal Literary Society increased in numbers and efficiency, still excluding visitors and allowing only young men to join. After the holidays, and perhaps about the opening of the spring term of 1873, a small number, including some of the leading members of the Literary Society, organized a new society called the "Philomathean," with Hyre I. Clark as president; he having graduated the year before, was at this time principal of the public schools of Fairmont, and Volney B. Trimblee, one of the brightest students in the Senior Class, was made secretary.

When it became generally known among the students, and especially among the members of the old society, that a new society had been organized, it had a most astonishing effect. Instead of treating it as a natural growth, and a good indication, a large number of members of the old society regarded it as treason, insubordination, and in fact everything but something good. The matter was debated in and out of the old society, and the feeling did not subside until the end of the term, when the big graduating class of 1873, of twenty-five members, eliminated most of the leaders of both societies and ended the existence of the new one.

The commencement exercises in June, 1873, was a great affair. The large class was composed, for the most part of persons who had taught before they came to the Normal. The exercises were held in the third story of the new Normal building on Main Street, front of the now old Second Ward School, which was just then approaching completion and was occupied for the first time.

Each Senior prepared and delivered an oration or an essay. The commencement week idea was fully inaugurated, the baccalaureate sermon was delivered by the principal, Dr. Blair, on the Sunday preceding commencement.

The Alumni Association was organized on commencement day by the big graduating class, in Dr. Blair's old classroom in the north-east corner of the "first old" school building.

A meeting if the class had been announced during the commencement exercises, and most of the members were present.

Thomas C. Miller, valedictorian of the class, was made president, and the other officers were chosen, including a program of performers for the next year's commencement, consisting of orations, essays and a poem."

In the year 1876-77 the name of Prof. U. S. Fleming appears on the Board of Instructors, and in the following year, that of W. S. Meredith.

The death of Dr. Blair occurred in December, 1878, and judging by the esteem with which his memory is cherished, he must have been a worthy man and a most popular and efficient teacher. Following his death, Miss M. L. Dickey, who from the first had been his capable assistant, was appointed principal, serving with marked success until in June, 1882, when she resigned to marry Colonel R. E. Fleming. At the same time, Miss Lucy Fleming, who had been Miss Dickey's first assistant, resigned and later married. In the year 1880-81 the name of U. S. Fleming again appears on the teaching force, being second assistant, while that of Marcus M. Ross appears as third assistant. In addition to these there was an instructor in music—Mrs. Pinnell—and ten "assistant pupils."

In the autumn of 1882 Prof. U. S. Fleming, as Acting Principal, took charge of the school with five assistants, two of whom are members of the present faculty—Prof. E. E. Mercer and Mrs. Morrow nee Miss Cameron.

The following year Prof. Conrad A. Sipe, a man of culture and scholarly attainments, was elected Principal, with Professor Fleming as First Assistant. Professor Mercer had withdrawn, and a new teacher in the person of Miss Mary Jackson, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, a young woman of strong character and attractive personality, was added to the faculty.

At the close of that year, 1884, Professor Fleming resigned, and Miss Cameron was chosen First Assistant, remaining in that position during Professor Sipes' administration. In the spring of '85 J. Walter Barnes came in as teacher. In the year 1884-85 the music department was in charge of Miss Effie

Reed, daughter of Rev. J. B. Reed, at that time pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Fairmont; and an art department was established, with Miss Ross Sweney, of Wheeling, as instructor.

In 1887-88 Benjamin F. Ramage entered the school as a teacher, remaining in the school until his election as clerk of the Circuit Court, in 1890.

The year closing June 13, 1889, saw the largest attendance in the history of the school to that time—297—nor was it exceeded until the year 1894. Changes in the faculty had occurred—Miss Jackson having resigned at the close of the year 1888, and two new members having been added, Mr. C. W. Evans and Miss Lizzie Holland. afterwards wife of L. J. Corbly, while a department of Stenography and Typewriting had been established, with A. G. Sine in charge.

In August, 1889, Professor Sipe resigned to engage in business, and at a meeting of the Board held shortly afterward, Miss Cameron, who for five years had been Assistant to the principal, was elected Acting Principal, with J. Walter Barnes, Assistant, and Secretary of the Faculty.

In June, 1890, Miss Cameron resigned to marry George Morrow, of Fairmont, and the Board elected Prof. John Roemer, of Wheeling, to succeed her. Among the new members of the faculty were Miss A. B. Boyd, a graduate of Wooster University, now Mrs. C. M. Ritchie, of Fairmont, and Miss Mary E. Knight, now Mrs. George Price, of this city. For two or three years Francis Brown had been the teacher of elocution.

Professor Roemer served but one year, being succeeded by Prof. J. C. Gwynn, of Wheeling, who also served but one year, being succeeded by J. Walter Barnes, who had been a member of the school since the spring of 1885, and assistant principal since the fall of 1889. During Professor Gwynn's administration there were eight regular faculty members and seven student assistants, Miss Eliza Hayden, of Fairmont, having charge of the music.

Miss Irene T. Meyer, a teacher with a forceful personality, was assistant principal. Another member of the largely increased faculty was Mill Ella Miller, now Mrs. W. S. Neayers, of this city.

The school with the passing years had been steadily growing until now it had practically outgrown its quarters, and largely through the efforts of Professor Barnes, sentiment for a new building was aroused. On March 9 1891, the Legislature passed a bill providing for the sale of the state's interest in the old building for $15,000, and appropriating $20,000 additional for the erection of a new Normal School building.

On February, 1892, at the city of Charleston, the contract for the new building was let; on June 14 following, the cornerstone was laid with imposing ceremonies, and on March 27, 1893, the school took possession of its new home, its present quarters.

With new buildings, new equipment and a large and strong faculty, together with Professor Barnes's energy and fruitful advertising, the school grew and prospered.

Professor Barnes was in charge of the school until 1901, when he was succeeded by Prof. Marcus M. Ross, a native of Marion County, who for a number of years had been a teacher in Nashville, Tennessee.

Professor Ross entered upon his work with Prof. M. C. Lough as Assistant Principal, and despite considerable opposition from without, closed his first year's work in a satisfactory manner, with the good will of students and faculty. In the autumn of 1902, Professor Ross went hopefully to his task; but soon ill health overtook him, and while struggling bravely against it, and working with unflagging zeal for the school, he succumbed to the disease, and his fine, brave spirit passed to the great beyond. This was a blow to the school and a shock to the entire community. Subsequently, an impressive memorial service was held, at which the principal address was made by C. W. Waddell, then a member of the faculty, now a prominent physician of this city. Prof. M. C. Lowe became Acting Principal, conducting the school to the end of the year; shortly after which he withdrew from the teaching profession and subsequently went into journalism. During the administration of Professor Ross, Miss Ida Abbot,

TRAINING SCHOOL TEACHERS

Prof. E. E. Mercer and Prof. H. F. Rogers became members of the faculty.

In the fall of 1893 Prof. W. L. McCowan, Principal of the West Liberty Normal, was elected Principal of the Fairmont Normal, with Professor Mercer as Assistant Principal. Other members of this faculty were Miss Mable Moderwell, Prof. W. R. Shaw, Miss Mollie Virginia Smith and Miss Willa Hart Butcher, a graduate of the West Virginia University. Miss Butcher was teacher of Greek and Latin, and a leading member of the faculty. The Departments of Music, of Art, and of Expression were all operative under skilled teachers.

An insistent growing demand for trained teachers began now to make its impression upon West Virginia educators, and Prof. T. C. Miller, State Superintendent of Schools, with the co-operation of the other members of the Board of Regents, decided to establish a Department of Education in the Fairmont Normal School, and accordingly in the spring of 1905, Professor Miller secured Miss Isabel Davenport, a post-graduate student of Columbia University, to be the head of that department.

The following autumn Professor McCowan was succeeded by Prof. U. S. Fleming as Principal. Professor Fleming, while not in robust health, entered enthusiastically upon his duties, determined to meet the demand for professionally trained teachers, and to place the Normal School once more in the ranks of a real training school. Miss Davenport continued at the head of the Department of Education, and in the spring of 1906, a "Model School" of two grades was organized, with Miss Rowland, of Wisconsin, as expert teacher, all student teachers being under the immediate supervision of Miss Davenport. While the "Model School" had but two grades, it was a model school.

This same year another step in advance was taken through Professor Miller's zeal for his alma mater, in the erection and furnishing of the Woman's Hall. This building was occupied for the first time in the spring of 1906, and Miss Mollie Virginia Smith was placed in charge of the young women occupants.

The next year, 1907, Miss Davenport was transferred to the principalship of the Concord Normal School. Mrs. Morrow, who had resumed teaching the spring previous, was placed in charge of the educational department, with Miss Mary E. George, of New York, in charge of the "Model School" as expert teacher.

The last year of Professor Fleming's administration was an incessant struggle on his part against disease, and at the end of the year, his health continuing to fail, he resigned, and Dr. C. J. C. Bennett was elected in his stead, with J. G. Rohrbaugh as Assistant and teacher of Latin and Greek.

Dr. Bennett was an enthusiast for professional training, and bent practically all his energies in the direction of the establishment of a Training Department. Miss Montana Hastings was selected as the head of the department, with Miss Mary E. George as assistant. The "Model School" gave place to a "Practice School," with six grades installed. The following year the regular grades were installed and Miss Anne Austin, now at the head of the Training School in Concord Normal, was elected as one of Miss Hastings' assistants, subsequently Professor Rohrbaugh was transferred to the principalship of Glenville Normal, and Miss George later became his training teacher.

The Training Department touched a responsive chord in the hearts of young men and women ambitious to be teachers, and there was a largely increased attendance of students. Dr. Bennett further showed a progressive spirit in the inauguration of a summer school.

During the three years of Dr. Bennett's administration there had been several changes in the faculty; Professor Rohrbaugh's place was filled by Professor Stooksbury; Dr. A. J. Davis, Professor Beer, Professor Scherf and Miss Elizabeth Stalnaker had been added to the teaching force, together with Miss Mayme Ware, of Huntington, as teacher of Expression. At the beginning of Dr. Bennett's second year, Professor Scherf resigned to accept a position in the East, and the vacancy was filled by Prof. H. F. Rogers.

At the close of the school year June, 1910, Dr. Bennett resigned to accept a position in the University of Oregon. To succeed him, the Board of Regents elected Prof. O. I. Woodley, of New Jersey, as president, with Professor Stooksbury as Assistant. Recently Prof. Chester P. Higby was elected to the position of Assistant President. Professor Stooksbury having resigned at the beginning of this year to take a position in Savannah, Georgia.

If Dr. Bennett was enthusiastic concerning the training school, Professor Woodley is equally so, with the advantage of having been for years closely connected with the public schools.

This is now the third year of his connection with the school, and there has been great improvement in the better organization of the school, in the standard of scholarship, and in the evolution of the training school toward the more nearly ideal.

The prospect for the Fairmont Normal School was never brighter. The recent Legislature authorized the sale of the present building, the purchase of a new site, and the erection in the not remote future of a substantial building adequate to the needs of a professional school for teachers is assured.

BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS.

The Fairmont State Normal School is located in the heart of the City of Fairmont, within three or four blocks of the main business part of the City, and within a very few blocks of most of the churches. The grounds occupy an entire block, are well graded and terraced, and present an attractive appearance at all times.

The main building is constructed of red bricks, and has a frontage of one hundred feet with a depth of one hundred and fifty feet, and presents an imposing appearance. The first floor contains the offices, recitation rooms, and the biological, physical and chemical laboratories. The second floor contains the library rooms, gymnasium, and four large class rooms. On the third floor is the large auditorium, one of the most attractive and satisfactory assembly halls in the State. It will seat one thousand people. On this floor there are also two private instruction rooms for the music work, and the Mozart and Lyceum Literary Society halls. In the front of the building is the tower, in which is placed a Howard clock, with dials eight feet in diameter.

To the north of the main building is the girls' dormitory. It is a three story building, containing kitchen, pantry and dining room large enough to seat eighty people at one time, parlors and reception rooms, and rooms for sixty girls. It is fitted with steam heat and electric lights. The students' rooms are furnished with chairs, dresser and wash stand, ward robe, bed, mattress, and pillows. Each girl is required to furnish her own bed clothes and towels, and all room decoration desired. The price of board and room ranges from $3.05 to $3.55 per week, depending upon size and location of room. Board is payable monthly in advance.

LIBRARY.

"The true University is a collection of books".—Carlyle.

The alumni library, started about twenty years ago by the Alumni Association, formed the nucleus of the present library. Books have been added during the recent years, until now it contains about 5,000 catalogued volumes (this does not include government reports, of which there are over 2,000) and is especially complete in the departments of pedagogy, history, literature and economics.

The library has been selected with great care and every subject is represented by the best standard works. This enables the teacher to give breadth to his teaching, and each student to broaden his scholarship by comparative reading. The number of reference books is also large and carefully selected to meet the needs of real teaching and scholarship.

The library has a large number of the best periodicals. It will be a good thing for the students to look over the contents of all the best ones each month as they come in and read the few articles in each one which appeal to him. But he should select one some first rate worthy newspaper, as the

A CORNER OF THE LIBRARY

Outlook or Literary Digest, to read carefully, so that he may keep intelligently abreast of the times. Spending, however, very much time in reading the magazines, especially the stories, is largely a waste; better put the time on a good solid book.

"The library may be known as the solemn chamber in which a man can take courses of all that have been wise and great and good and glorious amongst the men that have gone before him."—G. Dawson.

The library is open from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. and from 6:30 to 7:30 of every school day, and from 9 A. M. to 12 M. on Saturday.

Books may be retained two weeks, and renewed for the same length of time, provided there is no special demand for them; such as are needed for class-room work are limited to one night.

Every book must be charged at the librarian's desk before being taken from the room; when it is returned, the borrower should see that the charge is cancelled.

Conversation and conduct inconsistent with quiet and order are prohibited in the library and adjoining halls, not only during school hours but at all times when the library is open.

Magazines are not to be taken from the library during the month for which they are issued.

The student should soon familiarize himself with the card catalog by means of which he can readily find if a certain book is in the library and just where it is.

A fine of three cents per day will be charged for books kept more than two weeks.

Magazines and Periodicals.

A carefully selected list of magazines and periodicals is furnished by the school, and become a part of the reference library. The following constitutes the list for the year 1912 and 1913:

Atlantic Monthly, Current Literature, Scribner's Magazine, Review of Reviews, North American Review, World's Work, Literary Digest, Popular Science Monthly, Outlook, Independent, Survey, Travel Magazine, Ladies' Home Journal, Country Life in America, St. Nicholas, School Review, Elementary School Teacher, Pedagogical Seminary, Kindergarten Review, Journal of Education, Primary Education, American Magazine, Craftsman, Psychological Clinic, Home and School Education, Progress, Normal Instructor, Journal of Geography, London Times, Springfield Republican, American Historical Review, American Journal of Psychology, The American Physical Educational Review, Education, McClure's Magazine, Educational Review, Hearsts' Magazine, The World Today, Psychological Review and Bulletin, Life and Health, National Stockman and Farmer, The Fruit Grower, Teachers' College Record, West Virginia Farmer, New York Times, Toronto Globe, Manchester Guardian, New York Evening Post.

STUDENT BODY.

The entire school is organized into an association known as the Student Body. It fills an important place in the general work of the Normal School. Through this organization, receptions are arranged, the Lecture Course directed, and many other special services as they arise from time to time are rendered. A Student Body fee of $1.30 a year is required of all students. This covers the expenses for receptions, flowers, and additional expenses of the Student Body. It also entitles the student to a ticket for all numbers in the regular Lecture Course. It is paid at the time the tuition is paid at the beginning of each semester. The students also assess themselves a penny a week with which to purchase music for the Victrola and other purposes.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

In the early history of the school two literary societies were organized, which have had a great influence in the growth and development of the school. The Lyceum Society was organized in 1872, and the Mozart Society in 1874. Since that time these societies have been active and have exerted a positive, constructive influence upon the lives of many Normal School students.

Any student of the Normal School is eligible to membership in these societies. They meet regularly each Friday evening. The programs are varied in character, and thus meet the varying abilities of the different students. Vocal and instrumental music, declamations, readings, orations, and debates, are given with sufficient frequency to enable the students to get practice and the growth and confidence that comes from practice.

There is a good healthy rivalry between the two societies, which without doubt is an important factor in their activity and vigor. During the commencement season, the annual contest between the two societies is held. This is regarded as the greatest school event of the year, one which fills the spacious auditorium full to overflowing.

ATHLETICS.

Athletics is an important part in the life of the students in the Normal School. The past year has probably been the most successful year in Athletics that the school has had. At the opening of school in September, it was announced that clean athletics would be the rule here, and that no student would be permitted to play who was not a regularly enrolled student, taking full and regular work, and who was not in good standing in his work at the time of the contest. Any school that does not put its athletics on this basis is not just to the principles for which the school ought to stand. Athletics as conducted in many schools is the most immoral feature about them, and any school which bases its standard on the success of its athletic teams, and which constantly certifies incorrectly to the good standing and integrity of the team members, is working a personal injury to the members of the team itself, and to the school as a whole.

Football, basket ball, baseball, and track athletics are the fields of athletic activity. Basket ball probably is the most important from the students' standpoint. This is due to the class teams, both girls and boys, and the class contests which take place. A very spirited rivalry exists between the classes, and so the class competitions are as keen as between the regular team and visiting teams.

Athletics properly directed and combined with gymnasium work, may be of great service to students and to the institution. Plans are being developed for giving gymnasium work, for which credit will be given. Learning how to take care of and handle the body is as valuable information as that which is gathered from any other source, so credit should be given for regular work and instruction in the gymnasium the same as for other subjects. Each girl who enters in September should plan to provide herself with a gymnasium suit of dark blue material, so that she can be ready for this work.

MUSIC.

The music work of the Fairmont Normal School is designed to accomplish three purposes. Through study and interpretation of carefully selected music, vocal and instrumental, a love and appreciation for music is developed within the souls of the students. By means of the Victrola, selections from great choruses, and operas are studied and used also as the center for the interpretation of the choruses and operas. By the same means also, the great instrumental and voice selections are produced as interpreted by the world's great performers. This is a very fruitful and efficient method for establishing standards of music, and standards of musical interpretation.

Much attention is given to chorus work. This affords opportunity to express the self musically through the best compositions, which very much broadens musical feeling and judgment. So well has this work been done that it can be truthfully said that the students of the Fairmont Normal School enjoy music when interpreted for them, or when they have an opportunity to interpret for themselves.

Scholarship

OFFICERS OF THE LYCEUM LITERARY SOCIETY

In addition to the music work mentioned above, very competent instruction is given in voice training and on the piano. This instruction is not included in the tuition, but is done by personal arrangement with the instructors. The Normal School has several pianos, which are placed at the disposal of student for practice without additional cost.

All students who cannot read music, or who have not studied music, are required to do class work, in which the meaning of musical terms and phrases is carefully explained and much practice given in reading simple music as a preparation for the musical interpretation in the chorus work spoken of above. Regular credit is given for this work, the same as for other subjects in the course.

EXTENSION COURSES.

There is a growing restlessness among the teachers of West Virginia for more scholarship and better preparation for teaching. The Normal School is trying to do what it can to satisfy the local desire and need. During the year 1911-12, courses in the Development of Modern Europe and in Principles of Education were given. During the current year, two courses are being given. A literary course "The Modern Novel as an Interpreter of Modern Life", is proving very helpful and suggestive, and very much increasing the literary horizon of all who are taking it. Another course "Principles of Education Applied to Teaching" is likewise very stimulating and practical. The course on the modern novel is also being given to a group of teachers in Clarksburg. Additional courses will be given during the coming year.

LECTURES AND ENTERTAINMENTS.

No school in the State has more fine lectures and entertainments than the Fairmont State Normal School. The following lectures and entertainments have been given during the past year:

Whitney Concert Co., of New York City.
Collegiate Quartette, of New York City.
Robert Parker Miles, "Tallow Dips."
Ross Crane, Cartoonist.
Ex-Governor Hanly, "The Patriotism of Peace".
Margaret Stahl, Reading—"The Dawn of To-morrow".
Ralph Parlette, "The University of Hard Knocks".
Mrs. Jessie E. Southwick, Reading—"Jean de Arc".
Euclid Male Quartette, Cleveland, Ohio.
New York Symphony Orchestra, Walter Damrosch, Conductor.

Vocational Lectures:

Law, Hon. E. M. Showalter, two lectures.
Medicine, Dr. J. W. MacDonald, two lectures.
Engineering, Prof. C. R. Jones, two lectures.
Agriculture, Prof. C. R. Titlow, two lectures.
Journalism, Hon. O. S. McKinney, two lectures.

SOME RULES AND REGULATIONS.

1. Tuition must be paid upon entrance for the semester.
2. Expenses for room and board in the dormitory must be paid at least weekly in advance.
3. Girls living in the dormitory will not be permitted to receive gentleman callers Sunday evenings, and only twice during the week at hours designated by the President. One evening each week is to be given to the literary societies, and one other for social purposes. Permission will be granted by the Preceptress as to when and how this evening shall be spent, and the place and the company must be satisfactory to her.
4. All students of the Normal School are expected to give five evenings each week to study. A continued violation of this rule will be considered sufficient ground for expulsion. Young men frequenting pool rooms, saloons, and other undesirable places, and engaging in practices inconsistent with the purposes of the Normal School, will be asked to withdraw from the institution.

5. Students who represent the school in any athletic event, or in any society entertainment, must be regularly enrolled students taking at least three subjects, and must be in good standing in at least three subjects. This applies particularly to athletics and debates with other schools and to the annual inter-society contests.

6. Students who do not live in the Dormitory or who do not live at home will be expected to conform to the rules relating to study hours and social life. They must secure permission from the President to attend special social functions or to leave the city.

7. All rooming and boarding places must be approved by the President. This rule will be strictly enforced.

TUITION AND EXPENSES.

The tuition in the Normal School is $9.00 per year, one-half to be paid at the opening of each semester. There is also a laboratory fee of 50c for each semester for those who take chemistry and physics and for those who take agriculture and botany. A student body fee of $1.30 a year is required of all students. This covers the expenses for receptions, etc. It also entitles the student to a ticket for all numbers in the regular lecture course. Half of this amount is collected at the beginning of each semester when the tuition is paid. It is felt that no other investment brings larger results than the small amount that is put into good concerts, lectures, and entertainments. A class fee of $.25 cents for each Semester will be collected at the time of paying the tuition. The expenses for books for the year is about $10.00. Other expenses for pencils, paper, etc., will probably amount to $5.00. Board in the dormitory, including meals and room rent, ranges from $3.05 to $3.55, depending upon the location of the room. Girls furnish bedding and towels. Rooms for girls can be obtained near the Normal School and meals taken at the Dormitory making the entire cost about $4.50 a week. Board and rooms can be secured in private homes for about the same amount. Young men can secure rooms for $1.00 to $1.50 per week, and by boarding in clubs can make the entire expense for board per week from $3.50 to $4.00. Board and room at private houses can be secured for about $4.50.

A REAL NORMAL SCHOOL.

A modern Normal School provides three distinct phases of work:

1. A thorough review of the subjects to be taught in the various schools.

2. Thorough courses in Psychology, Pedagogy, Methods, and School Management.

3. A study of the workings of a school system, with much observation and practice work in a well organized training school.

The Fairmont State Normal School probably meets all of these conditions better than any other school in the State. The Normal work is organized entirely with this idea in mind and every effort is put forth to enable the school to meet completely each of these requirements.

To those who are expecting to teach, we would advise that they attend only those schools that meet these requirements. There are many schools which are organized for another purpose that have added Normal Courses, but they fall short of doing the work of a good normal school, and thus the graduates cannot have the broad view of educational work that should characterize every teacher.

By special arrangements with the Board of Education of the City of Fairmont, the Fourth Ward Building is the Training Department of the Normal School. It consists of eight regular grades, each one under the direction of a carefully selected teacher, and the whole under the general direction of an efficient principal. Each of these teachers becomes the critic teacher of the grade in which she teaches. This fact enables the student to observe good examples of teaching, and later to teach under the guidance of one whom they observed at work. The Training School is under the general charge of a superintendent, assisted by the primary supervisor and a grammar grade supervisor. These three persons and the teachers of the Training School make up the Training School Faculty, and we are certain that it is the most efficient group of educational workers in the State.

COURSE OF STUDY.

The standard American Normal School requires for admission a diploma from a four year high school, and the Normal School course consists of two years in advance of this. In our own State the practice has been to give the normal work in four years of attendance, or in one year after graduation from a four year high school, thus, in fact, making the time of preparation for teachers in the State schools much less than in other States. During the past year some additions to the work have been made in the various schools.

The time seems to have come when the Normal Schools of the State should move forward and require work of equal grade with that done in other states. At the opening of school in September the Fairmont State Normal School started with this idea in mind. Students entering for the first time from four year high schools began the two year's course for graduation. Those entering who were graduates of other than four year high schools were given full credit for the work they had done. This move in the State, we believe, will be a very valuable one for the teachers and for the schools in which they teach. The following course of study went into effect at the opening of school in September. At a joint meeting of the Board of Regents and the Principals of the Normal Schools, the following plan was adopted as the basis for the Normal School work in West Virginia:

1. The Academic work leading to the Normal Course shall consist of four years, and shall be known as the Secondary Course. Sixteen units of work will be required. This course shall be known, in the several years that compose it, as

The Freshman Secondary
The Sophomore Secondary
The Junior Secondary
The Senior Secondary

2. The Normal Course shall consist of two years' work in advance of the Secondary Course, and the years of this course shall be known as

The Junior Normal
The Senior Normal

3. The following were agreed upon as the minimum for the amount of work required in the Secondary Course:

English	4 units
Algebra	1 unit
Geometry	1 unit
History	2 units
Science	2 units
Language	2 units
Manual Arts	1-3 unit
Vocal Music	1-3 unit

The remainder of the 16 units of this course shall be made up by each principal and approved by the Board of Regents.

In accordance with the above requirements, the Fairmont Normal School offers the following courses:

Two years of language will be required, and after 1913, these must be taken in one language.

In very special cases the President may make other electives or accept certified work from accredited High Schools in subjects not specified in this couree.

Graduates of four year high schools will be admitted to the Normal Course upon presentation of certificate of work from the Principal. Graduates of other than four year high schools will be given credit in the secondary course for all work which has been certified to by their Principal as being equivalent to that ordinarily done in high schools.

Graduates of the full Normal Course will be eligible to teach in any school in the State. Their diplomas will also be accepted in most other States, as the work done will be that of the standard American Normal School.

Those who complete the full Normal Course will receive University credit for about one and two-third years of work. This will make it possible for a student to graduate at the University within two years of graduation from the Normal, by taking summer school work.

This strengthening of the Normal Course is thus an academic advantage, as well as a professional advantage to those who complete the course, and it also makes the diploma of distinct value, because it represents as much work as is given in any regular Normal School.

Pupils who do not desire to take the Normal Course may take the elective subjects, for which credit will be given that will entitle them to University credit. Only one diploma will be issued in the Normal department. An academic diploma will be given upon the completion of the Secondary Course.

DEPARTMENT OF PROFESSIONAL TRAINING.

Psychology, One Semester. The aim of this course is to lay the foundation for the scientific study of education, to develop the consciousness of the process and the habit of observing the process, as well as the content of education.

The method is largely inductive at first beginning with simple introspective and observational problems leading to an appreciation of the fact that the subject matter of psychology is to be found in the mental processes of the teacher and the pupil. This is followed by a more systematic study of reflex, instinctive, and conscious behavior.

General Method, One Semester. This course is intended to present the general principles underlying the teaching process. It is fundamental for all the courses in special method and practice in that it formulates the general principles upon which are based the selection of materials and the methods of presentation. The leading topics are: (1) the meaning and aims of education; (2) the materials of education—a study of the child, his instincts, tendencies, possibilities, apperception, attention, and motivation; (3) the forms of instruction; development, drill, appreciation; (4) the use of the lesson plan; (5) the hygiene of instruction; (6) the evolution and function of subject matter; (7) testing results. This course is accompanied by the observation of actual school activities in connection with each subject treated.

History of Education, One Year, two periods per week. The aim of this course is to lead the student to an understanding of present educational ideals, principles, problems, and practices; to lead to an appreciation of the dignity of the profession; and to develop a perspective which will give stability and poise in the midst of extreme opinions and fads. To this end the emphasis is placed upon principles and practices rather than upon men, and these principles and practices are studied in the light of their social setting. A brief study is made of primitive education to show its simplest beginnings, then follows a study of Greek and Roman education. The Mediaeval period receives some attention, but the greater part of the time is devoted to the modern period.

Principles of Education, One Year, two periods per week. This course is synthetic, gathering up and attempting to formulate the principles underlying the science of education. The most important principles which biology, physiology, psychology, and sociology have contributed to the science of education will be considered and their application to educational problems indicated. The following are some of the topics to be considered: The significance of evolution for education; the aims of education; the evolution of the curriculum and the principles which should underly the selection of subject matter; the principles underlying the learning process; the maturing of the nervous system, physical growth and development, fatigue, and their bearing on educational problems; principles of moral education. There will be no special text used in this course but extensive library work will be required.

School Administration, One Semester. The first four weeks will be devoted to a consideration of school room management; then will follow a discussion of some of the larger problems as follows: Classification and promotion of pupils, the relation of the school to the home and to the community, the improvement of teachers in practice, the ethics of school craft, special schools for defectives and delinquents, open air schools, the organization of industrial education, sanitary conditions, medical inspection of schools, sources of materials, etc. This course consists of lectures, reports, and discussions.

Special Methods.

From two to six weeks is given to each of the subjects taught in the Training School. This instruction is given by the heads of the special departments and the Training School faculty.

General principles and devices for teaching the particular subject are first presented. This is followed by the detailed preparation of specific lessons for actual class work. Emphasis is placed upon lesson plans, materials, and the teacher's preparation.

The class is divided into sections, one receiving instruction in primary work, and the other in that of the upper grades.

TRAINING SCHOOL.

The Training School furnishes an opportunity for students to observe the application of the principles of psychology, and of General and Special Method as they are acquiring these principles in the theoretical courses, and later on to apply their knowledge of these principles in actual practice, thus testing their knowledge and acquiring skill.

The Training School consists of the eight grades below the high school. There is a critic teacher in every room and there are two supervisors. Every Normal School student, before graduation, is required to spend one hour each day for at least eighteen weeks in the Training School beyond the required work in observation during the junior year. More practice will be required if the student seems to need it. Before taking practice, the student must have completed the course in psychology and in General Method. Pupil teachers will be expected to help in the opening exercises and in the mechanics of the school room and playground. Each student teacher will teach at least two subjects, and his practice will be distributed so as to include at least two grades. The assignments of grades are made after a careful study of individual adaptability. As far as possible, the students' preferences will be considered in the assignment of subjects. An outline of the work to be done, together with general instructions as to management and responsibilities will be given each student before he begins his work.

The most thorough academic and pedagogical preparation is required for every lesson taught. Written lesson plans are required during the early part of the work, and these are criticised by a critic teacher and re-constructed by the student before he may teach. Later on reports of lessons are written and the student is asked to criticise his own work in the light of pedagogical principles in order to develop in him the habit of conscious self-improvement. All of the work is under the direct supervision of the critic or supervisor. The hour from three-thirty to four-thirty of every school day, not including Friday, will be reserved for informal critic meetings. During this hour, students may be called and any student can arrange for a personal meeting with critic or supervisor.

ELEMENTARY. METHODS.

This course is given only in the spring term and is especially suited to the needs of those students who have been teaching or expect to teach the next year, and have not the courses in psychology, child study, history of education, and principles of teaching. It is the aim of the course to give a few primary laws of learning and of teaching, some fundamental principles of school organization and of school management, and some of the essentials of the recitation and of study.

UNITED STATES HISTORY.

This is a secondary school course, fourth year, one semester, four days a week. This course follows in the main the suggestions of the great historical reports. Western and economic history get proper emphasis. Map work, reference work, and reports are required of all taking the course.

ADVANCED COURSE IN UNITED STATES HISTORY.

This is an elective course open to the students of the Normal Department, to be offered during the coming year. A limited period of the nations history will be studied intensively.

ENGLISH HISTORY.

One year, four hours a week. The work in English History more than fulfills the requirements for college entrance. The general aim of the course is to explain the British Empire of to-day. The structure and working of the Imperial Government, English Economic History, and the British Empire receive more than the usual recognition. Map work, the making of outlines, and reference work in the library are essential parts of the work.

ADVANCED COURSE, MODERN EUROPE.

One year, four hours a week. The aim of this course is to explain the present situation of the peoples of European origin. To accomplish this, their development since the days of Louis XIV are followed. In addition to the usual political topics, the intellectual history of the eighteenth century, the commercial, agricultural, and industrial revolutions, modern imperialism, and the socialist and humanitarian movements receive adequate recognition. Map work, note taking, and extensive reference work are required of all taking the course. During the entire year, also, each member of the class follows in the great newspapers of the world one contemporary movement, and traces its past history. This course is open only to those who have had the equivalent of a four years' high school course.

ANCIENT HISTORY.

This course covers the earliest historical periods to the breaking up of the Empire of Charlemagne. Oriental History is studied far enough to explain the beginnings of Greek and Roman History. In the Greek and Roman history as well as in the Oriental, emphasis is placed upon manners, customs, arts, and religion with reference to showing their permanent contributions to civilization.

Text—Reference Readings.

First Semester (First Year) Oriental and Greek History.

Second Semester (First Year) Roman History.

CIVICS.

The course in Civics follows, in general, the outline given in Forman's "Advanced Civics". The essential principles of American Government are first taken up, under such topics as "Society and Government", "Types of Government", "Popular Government", "Representative Government", "Constitutional Government", "Federal Government", "Party Government", "Civil and Political Liberty", etc. Then the machinery or organization of our federal and state governments is described, with a discussion of the functions or activities of our government and the practical problems which arise under its administration. Under this head come such topics as "International Relations", "Defense", "Taxation", "Finance", "Commerce".

“Elections”, “Education”, “Corporations”, “Labor”, “Crime”, “Charities”, etc.

Throughout the course emphasis is placed upon current events and their connection with the points discussed, and upon the idea that instruction in Civics should have for its highest aim the development in the learner of sound notions of political morality.

ARITHMETIC.

In Arithmetic the work at first consists of a review of definitions and the fundamental processes to discover the principles involved in and derived from these processes. Thoroughness in elementary processes and principles is insisted upon. The subsequent work is so arranged as to show the unity of the subject—to show that, though the terms used and the processes may vary, the underlying principles are all the same. Most of the students are to become teachers and this work is intended to help them in their teaching and to give a foundation for their study of the best methods of presenting the subject.

ALGEBRA.

In Algebra special attention is at first given to the elementary processes and principles, and the application of these to the solution of simple problems by means of the equation, definitions being given as needed. Much attention is given to factoring—emphasis being placed upon a few distinct types—the basis upon which the greatest part of Algebra is built. In connection with simultaneous linear equation the graph is introduced, special attention being given to two methods of elimination. Quadratic equations are introduced through factoring. This is followed by the completion of the square, the outcome of which is the formula derived from the general quadratic equation—a formula so important that it should be fixed in the mind for use in the subsequent part of the subject. The logic of elementary Algebra is studied in connection with equivalent equation and extraneous roots. The year's work includes also a study of the theory of exponents and radical.

BOYS' BASKETBALL TEAM

PLANE GEOMETRY.

The work in geometry is begun by requiring the student to observe and construct the elementary geometric forms, and in this connection to learn the definitions. A clear conception of these is essential to an understanding of geometry, as they form the basis of the subject. One of the chief objects of the study of geometry is to cultivate the habit of close observation, of comparison, of exact logical thinking, and of clear accurate expression. To secure all this, the theorems in the text are used, after which many exercises are furnished to test the student's ability to apply the principles learned from the demonstration. One year is given to plane geometry. Solid geometry may be elected.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

This Course aims to give to teachers up-to-date scientific ideas both as regards subject matter and methods of teaching. Special effort is made to present this subject attractively and to lay emphasis upon aspects of the subject most worth while. Anatomy is taught only as a means toward teaching the more practical and interesting knowledge of physiological processes and their application to hygiene.

Lecture demonstrations and a few individual laboratory experiments are given. Text-Principles of Physiology and Hygiene, by George W. Fitz. Assigned library readings.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY.

This subject is presented under the sub-heads of the earth as a planet, the land, the sea; the atmosphere, life, and the relation of Physical Geography to other subjects, as Physics, Astronomy, History, Geology, Agriculture, Forestry, Botany, etc.

Besides the use of a text, there are required readings and reports. Excursions are made and much emphasis is placed on first-hand knowledge. There is no other subject that has a more wholesome, broadening effect than Physical Geography.

BIOLOGICAL SCIENCE.

Biology is of such importance in its relation to education that no teacher can afford to neglect it. This work is planned to meet the needs of the graded and secondary schools. The work consists of recitations, laboratory work, and frequent field trips. Two courses are given.

A—Biology. This work begins with a microscopic study of unicellular life, a special study of the morphology and physiology of the cell. The characteristic differences of animal and plant life are shown, and a brief survey is made of the evolutionary development of organisms into higher forms. Some attention is given to economic entomology. The work is intended to vitalize the subject of biology and open the eyes and mind of the student to the relationship of organic life met in his environment.

B—Botany. Class, laboratory, and field work. This course is designed to especially fit the student to take up the subject of agriculture and to help him in nature study work. A brief review is given of the life and processes of the lower plant life from an economic standpoint. Detailed microscopic studies of plant tissues are made and a general knowledge of structure, feeding habits and effect of environment is given. Enough work is done in systematic botany to acquaint the student with the characteristics of the more common families of plants.

AGRICULTURE.

Since the State law requires the teaching of agriculture in all public schools, it is the aim of the Fairmont Normal to give instruction in this subject that will fit the teacher for his work.

A—Elementary Agriculture. This course is especially designed for the country teacher and the beginner in Agriculture. The active practical work of agriculture is carried on with the theoretical work. By means of field trips, laboratory work and readings, a study of the formation and value of the various soils is made and the best methods of improvement and care are given. The elementary principles of seed selection, planting, cultivation, etc., are carried out in a practical way. Attention is given to animal husbandry, dairying, and practical farm management.

B—Advanced Agriculture. This work is designed more especially for the student who finishes the Normal Course and is preparing for college work. Botany and Chemistry are prerequisites. The real problems of the West Virginia farmer are taken up in the most practical way. Seed selection, testing, harvesting and storing of grains and forage crops, feeding and care of farm animals, and the ordinary practical principles of dairying are features of the work. The care and value of manures, use of fertilizers, soil studies and preparation, planting and care of the orchard are made clear by actual demonstration. Special emphasis is given to the nature and control of the common pests and diseases of farm crops. Four class periods and five hours of laboratory each week are required. Some good text is taken as a basis, but constant use is made of government bulletins, farm journals, and other related reading matter.

ELEMENTARY GENERAL PHYSICS.

This subject continues throughout the year. It consists of the usual divisions: Mechanics of liquids, solids, and gases; Heat, Electricity, Sound and Light. Numerous class-room demonstrations are given, and an enthusiastic interest is maintained. Individual laboratory work is made a strong feature of the course. The phenomena of physics are met with on every hand in our every day lives, and though often direct and simple, are comparatively little thought about or understood by people who have no training in physics. This course is a great aid in the interpretation of the physical forces about us. The educational value of this study is very great. Recitations four hours a week; laboratory work two hours a week.

Texts—Mann & Twiss's Physics; Millikan and Gales Laboratory Course in Physics.

ELEMENTARY GENERAL CHEMISTRY.

This course extends throughout the school year. It is accompanied by a large amount of laboratory work, giving the student first hand knowledge of materials and chemical reactions upon which the theoretical work of the classroom is based. Chemistry touches life on every side but unless a good foundation is laid it will not be very useful. Just enough theory, therefore, is taught to give unity and usefulness to the body of facts presented. We especially emphasize applications of chemistry to explanations of phenomena of physiology and hygiene, domestic arts, agriculture, and the industries of our own State.

Text: Brownlee's First Principles of Chemistry, and the accompanying Laboratory Manual.

ADVANCED COURSE IN CHEMISTRY.

This course includes a study of qualitative analysis and elementary physical chemistry. It has unusual educational value, giving a thorough review of the first year subject matter by giving extensive and diversified applications of the principles of facts of general chemistry. It attempts to give students thorough grounding in such theoretical matter as:

- (1) Chemical Arithmetic, through calculations required in several quantitative experiments.
- (2) The Gas Laws.
- (3) Electrolytic Dissociation.
- (4) Measure of Concentrations. Normal Solutions.
- (5) Law of Mass Action.

Five hours per week is required by this course for laboratory work.

Text: Hill's Lecture Notes in Qualitative Analysis. Library reading.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

Beginning with September, Domestic Art and Manual Training will be introduced into the Normal School. The work in these subjects will be elementary in character, but at the same time fundamental and practical. Much of this will be an expanding of what is already known by the students, but which has never been defined. When the new building is erected, it is expected that special provisions will be made for making courses in Domestic Art and Manual Training very broad and thorough.

In connection with the cooking work, a careful study of diet will be made, which will be applied so far as practical in the meals which are served in the Dormitory. If there is special value in observing and knowing the facts of diet, they certainly should be applied in institutions where knowledge is supposed to have its most perfect and consistent application. Realizing this, plans are being made by the Board of Regents and the President to give a practical application of food preparation in the Dormitory.

Each year a course in camp cooking will be given for junior and senior boys. This course will be very practical and as distinctively educational as any course given in the Normal School.

MODERN LANGUAGES.

French.

First Year. Grammar, reading and constant practice in pronunciation. Stress is laid upon the pronoun and verb. Chardenal's Complete French Course; Aldrich and Foster's French Reader.

Second Year. Advanced grammar, composition, translation, and dictation. Chardenal's Advanced French Course; Chardenal's Grammar; Laurie's Memoires d'un Collegien; Lamartine's Graziella; George Sand's La Petite Fadette; Merimee's Colomba.

German.

First Year. Pronunciation, grammar, reading of short stories, elementary composition, and conversation. Vos Essentials of German; Super's Reader; Ein Sommer in Deutschland; Immensee; Der Sindenbaum.

Second Year. Rapid reading of German prose and poetry; translation of English prose into German; discussion of grammatical points in connection with the translation; study of irregular verbs; dictation; composition; Der Neffe als Onkel; Die Journalisten; Stille Wasser; Willhelm Tell; Hermann und Dorothea; Klenze's Deutsche Gedichte; Harris' Prose Composition.

Latin.

Recognizing that the study of Latin by those who are preparing to teach is important, the relation of Latin to English is held in mind; similarities in constructions are noted and attention given to the derivation of English words from Latin roots. The first year is spent in drills in pronunciation, quantity, accent, the study of forms, vocabulary, and constructions. In nearly every lesson exercises in translating English into Latin and Latin into English are given. These exercises lead to a mastery of forms and principles that make the study of Caesar an easy task.

The second year's work is given to the mastery of Caesar, the third to Cicero, and the fourth to Vergil. Other classics may be substituted for parts of the authors named.

The aim of the study of Latin should be the acquirement both of intrinsic and of disciplinary values, and this two-fold aim is held constantly in mind.

ENGLISH SECONDARY COURSE.

First Year. The essential aim of the first year's work in English is to develop feeling for or appreciation of language. During the first part of the year the story world will be considered. Myths, fables, fairy stories, historical stories, and all other types of stories will be considered and many examples of each type will be read and studied. This work is the foundation of the literary study which follows. The last half of the year will be given to the reading and study of literary classics and many short poems, drawn from different fields of literature. Composition work will be given throughout the year in connection with the reading and study.

Second Year. The aim of the second year will be essentially the same as that of the first year. There will also be added to it the secondary aim which is the consideration of American authors and their works. In connection with this study, composition exercises will be given. Two days of each week will be given to consideration of the relation of words in the sentence, or to grammar study. It is believed that the placing of grammar in the second year will be a decided gain to every student of English.

Third Year. The third year's English consists of a course in Rhetoric together with the reading of such literature as is necessary to give background for a study of the principles of composition. The aim of this course is to enable the student to acquire such a mastery of the English language as will enable him to express himself forcibly and effectively.

Fourth Year. The fourth year will be devoted to a study of English Literature, the aim being to acquaint the student with the great English masterpieces, to inculcate a love for good literature, and to aid him to the possession of the power of intelligent and appreciative reading. A brief survey of the development of English literature is given, with special attention to the marked literary movements; a close study of one or more masterpieces of each period is made, including two or three of Shakespeare's great plays.

ENGLISH NORMAL COURSE.

Advanced English. The course is based upon a study of English prose fiction, the contemporary realistic novel serving as a starting point. The aim is to lead the student to judge these novels, first of all, as studies of such social conditions as they themselves know. The study proceeds from the later novelists to those of earlier periods. Methods of portraying character, elements of plot structure, the significance of setting, and qualities of style, are brought to the student's attention by contrast and comparison. A representative novel of each of the following authors is read and discussed somewhat in detail: Howells, Hardy, Meredith, Stevenson, George Eliot, Thackeray, Mrs. Gaskell, Dickens, Hawthorne, Scott, Jane Austen, and Goldsmith. Frequent references is made to critical essays, especially those in which novelists have given their own theories of their art. The work in composition is directed chiefly toward increasing the student's appreciation of literary values.

REVIEWS.

The review of the common branches for the Junior Year in the Normal Course is intended to give a good basis for special methods in the Senior Year. Careful attention is given to the language of each subject, the exact meaning of terms, clear definitions, and the formulation of the general principles of the subject. The work is largely synthetic. It puts together the facts learned in the earlier courses into related form so that the student may have a clear concept of each subject as a whole.

FAIRMONT STATE NORMAL.

Location.

The location of the Normal School in Fairmont offers opportunities and advantages not found in other schools. It being a railroad center, it is easily accessible to those desiring to enter from all the northern sections of the State. The city itself offers many advantages by way of entertainments, concerts and lectures. Perhaps no other city in the State offers so many first class attractions as Fairmont. All of these make a very valuable supplementary addition to the regular work of the school. The City Schools are also exceptional in quality. These are open to Normal School students for observation and study, thus giving those who attend good examples of good schools and good teaching. Fairmont is also a healthy city and, if reasonable care is exercised, there need be no fear concerning health. The work of the Normal School is also much enhanced by the co-operation of the various pastors, and by the business men of the city, who are ever ready to give their services in whatever way they may help. All of the above influences make Fairmont an ideal place for a Normal School.

NORMAL SCHOOL BUILDING

HISTORY OF THE FAIRMONT STATE NORMAL.

BY MRS. N. R. C. MORROW.

It is impossible in space so limited as that afforded in the catalogue to give more than a brief outline of the history of the Fairmont Normal School, and much therefore, that would be vitally interesting must necessarily be omitted.

The early history of the school is given somewhat more in detail since that is less familiar to the great majority of the alumni than the more recent history, and therefore of greatest interest. For the information pertaining to those early years, the writer acknowledges her indebtedness to the Hon. B. L. Butcher, who almost from its beginning has been more or less closely identified with the school.

The Legislature of West Virginia, by Chapter 120 of the Acts of 1867, provided for the State Normal School at Marshall College, Huntington, and created a Board of Regents.

Dr. William R. White, of Fairmont, at that time State Superintendent of free schools, and previous to his election to that office, at the head of an academy in Fairmont, conceived the idea of asking for a branch of the Normal School to be established in Fairmont, and communicating this to his friends, among whom was ex-Governor A. B. Fleming, received their hearty support, and a charter was speedily obtained under the title, "The Regency of West Virginia Normal School."

By Chapter 123, Acts of 1867, an appropriation of $5,000 was secured from the State to be applied by said Regency in establishing a Normal School "for the purpose of educating and training teachers in the improved methods of instruction and discipline adopted in the common schools of other states."

By Chapter 146 of the Acts of 1868, the State Superintendent of Schools was authorized to purchase of said Regency of West Virginia Normal School, its property at not more than $2,000, an additional appropriation of $3,000 to be made for the school after the purchase.

By act of the Legislature 1869, the Independent School District of Fairmont was authorized to place a part of the pupils of the district under the direction of teachers in the Normal School as a "Model School" to be taught in the Normal building. At that time the Normal School was conducted in a building on the corner where the Watson Hotel now stands, and known in the last few years of its existence as the Old Shot Tower.

Dr. W. R. White was the first principal, continuing as such until the fall of 1870, when he was succeeded by Prof. J. C. Gilchrist, who served one year, he in turn being succeeded by Dr. J. G. Blair, of Parkersburg, a former vice-president of the Ohio State University. Dr. Blair remained at the head of the school until his death in December, 1878.

However far the Normal School wandered in subsequent years from its original purpose—that of offering professional training for teachers—it is clear from the record that it set out with that in view. In the earliest published catalog, that of 1873-4, we find two courses, viz.: Elementary Normal Course and Professional Normal Course. The subjects scheduled under the latter were wholly professional, and sound quite modern.

No record, so far as found by the writer, explains when, or how, or why the Fairmont Normal ceased to be a training school for teachers and became merely an academic institution; but tradition says that opposition to the principal, Dr. Blair, growing out of partisan politics, was the cause of the disunion between the Normal School and the Public School.

The Board of Instruction for 1873-4, as the faculty was then called, contained seven members, one of whom, Miss Alice V. Hewes, was the music instructor. Other members of the Board of Instruction were Dr. Blair's assistant, Miss M. L. Dickey; Miss Lucy Fleming, sister of ex-Governor Fleming; Prof. Thos. C. Miller, Principal of the Academic Department; B. L. Butcher, Assistant in Academic Department. The catalogue states that classes in German and French were conducted but does not state by whom.

The catalogue of 1875-76 reports its Board of Instructors

as consisting of Dr. J. G. Blair and Miss M. L. Dickey, with six assistant tutors, among whom were the names of Lee P. Watson, Miss Olive Zumbro, Jas. E. Mercer and Elias S. Amos.

By Chapter LXX, Acts of the Legislature 1872, an appropriation of $5,000 was made for a new building for the Normal at Fairmont, provided the Board of Education of Fairmont District would appropriate a like sum for the new building. This was done, and the present Second Ward school building was the new home of the Normal, and occupied for the first time in June, 1873.

For the very interesting history immediately following, the writer is indebted to the Hon. B. L. Butcher:—

"The spring term of 1872 brought a large number of new students, and the first graduating class was announced; and the first commencement in the history of the school was staged with good effect late in June of that year. This exercise was held in the Methodist Protestant Church, or the "Church on the hill," as it was then called, which stood across the street from the school building, where the home of the late Colonel Clarence L. Smith now stands.

The Normal Literary Society had been organized during that school year, and during the spring term had gained greatly among the students, many of whom joined it. Its sessions were not open to visitors except by special invitation from a member, each of whom could invite one. It met each Saturday afternoon in the school building and was exclusively for the young men.

There had been generated among the students in the school, especially at the spring term, a very enthusiastic educational spirit and loyalty to the school and its teachers. Numerous pledges were made among the students to return for the fall term to complete the Normal course. A noticeable fact was that most of the students who attended the spring term were in fact teachers already, some of several years' experience; but feeling their lack of training and book knowledge, together with the desire for a diploma of graduation which would exempt them from examination, many of the best teachers in Marion and surrounding counties attended the Normal.

Sprinkled among these were representatives of many of the best families of the town and country, attending the school for college preparation.

The teachers, Dr. J. G. Blair, Miss M. L. Dickey and Mr. George M. Fleming, were most competent to instruct not only in English branches but Greek and Latin and higher mathematics.

School opened at 9 o'clock and closed at 4, with an hour for recess, but the teachers heard classes before school, after school, and after supper as well sometimes, besides giving a full day's work. They found most receptive soil and eager minds, and could not deny "the seed sowing" and "mental nectar" that stimulated and held the students with loyal hearts in love with the school.

Fairmont was then, as it had been described before, "a village on the side of a hill" half way between Clarksburg and Morgantown, but it had what few towns have had in "paying quantity," a most liberal and friendly disposition to those who came to the town, whether on business, as visitors, teachers or students. The people seemed to the students—country boys and girls—more like country people than any others they had ever met. The best homes were opened to them for room and board; and the social life of these families included the students in their homes, so that the students became acquainted with the families, the men and women of the community, and these families took personal interest in the school, and the students were their special concern, to be made to feel at home; and a desire to come back. In part, this good quality has been lost, the city, now on its "seven hills," has deteriorated in its "fine, home-like flavor" to the student on first acquaintance; but once the crust is broken, the same generous hospitality is found in abundance.

The fall term of 1872 brought back double the number of students of the spring term, with nearly all back who were in at that term. Dr. Blair and Miss Dickey again took charge, and had an assistant, Miss Laura Strader, of Jefferson County, who was added to the teaching force.

The Normal Literary Society increased in numbers and efficiency, still excluding visitors and allowing only young men to join. After the holidays, and perhaps about the opening of the spring term of 1873, a small number, including some of the leading members of the Literary Society, organized a new society called the "Philomathean," with Hyre I. Clark as president; he having graduated the year before, was at this time principal of the public schools of Fairmont, and Volney B. Trimblee, one of the brightest students in the Senior Class, was made secretary.

When it became generally known among the students, and especially among the members of the old society, that a new society had been organized, it had a most astonishing effect. Instead of treating it as a natural growth, and a good indication, a large number of members of the old society regarded it as treason, insubordination, and in fact, everything but something good. The matter was debated in and out of the old society, and the feeling did not subside until the end of the term, when the big graduating class of 1873, of twenty-five members, eliminated most of the leaders of both societies and ended the existence of the new one.

The commencement exercises in June, 1873, was a great affair. The large class was composed for the most part of persons who had taught before they came to the Normal. The exercises were held in the third story of the new Normal building on Main Street, front of the new Second Ward School, which was just then approaching completion and was occupied for the first time.

Each Senior prepared and delivered an oration or an essay. The commencement week idea was fully inaugurated, the baccalaureate sermon was delivered by the principal, Dr. Blair, on the Sunday preceding commencement.

The Alumni Association was organized on commencement day by the big graduating class, in Dr. Blair's old classroom in the northeast corner of the "first old" school building.

A meeting of the class had been announced during the commencement exercises, and most of the members were present.

Thomas C. Miller, valedictorian of the class, was made president, and the other officers were chosen, including a program of performers for the next year's commencement, consisting of orations, essays and a poem."

In the year 1876-77 the name of Prof. U. S. Fleming appears on the Board of Instructors, and in the following year, that of W. S. Meredith.

The death of Dr. Blair occurred in December, 1878, and judging by the esteem with which his memory is cherished, he must have been a worthy man and a most popular and efficient teacher. Following his death, Miss M. L. Dickey, who from the first had been his capable assistant, was appointed principal, serving with marked success until in June, 1882, when she resigned to marry Colonel R. E. Fleming. At the same time, Miss Lucy Fleming, who had been Miss Dickey's first assistant, resigned and later married. In the year 1880-81 the name of U. S. Fleming again appears on the teaching force, being second assistant, while that of Marcus M. Ross appears as third assistant. In addition to these there was an instructor in music—Mrs. Pinnell—and ten "assistant pupils."

In the autumn of 1882 Prof. U. S. Fleming, as Acting Principal, took charge of the school with five assistants, two of whom are members of the present faculty—Prof. E. E. Mercer and Mrs. Morrow nee Miss Cameron.

The following year Prof. Conrad A. Sipe, a man of culture and scholarly attainments, was elected Principal, with Professor Fleming as First Assistant. Professor Mercer had withdrawn, and a new teacher in the person of Miss Mary Jackson, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, a young woman of strong character and attractive personality, was added to the faculty.

At the close of that year, 1884, Professor Fleming resigned, and Miss Cameron was chosen First Assistant, remaining in that position during Professor Sipes' administration. In the spring of '85 J. Walter Barnes came in as teacher. In the year 1884-85 the music department was in charge of Miss Effie Reed, daughter of J. B. Reed, at that time pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Fairmont; and an art department was established, with Miss Ross Sweney, of Wheeling as instructor.

In 1887-88 Benjamin F. Ramage entered the school as a teacher, remaining in the school until his election as clerk of the Circuit Court, in 1890.

The year closing June 13, 1889, saw the largest attendance in the history of the school to that time—297—nor was it exceeded until the year 1894. Changes in the faculty had occurred—Miss Jackson having resigned at the close of the year 1888, and two new members having been added, Mr. C. W. Evans and Miss Lizzie Holland, afterwards wife of L. J. Corbly, while a department of Stenography and Typewriting had been established, with A. G. Sine in charge.

In August, 1889, Professor Sipe resigned to engage in business, and at a meeting of the Board held shortly afterward, Miss Cameron, who for five years had been Assistant to the principal, was elected Acting Principal, with J. Walter Barnes, Assistant and Secretary of the Faculty.

In June, 1890, Miss Cameron resigned to marry George Morrow, of Fairmont, and the Board elected Prof. John Roemer, of Wheeling, to succeed her. Among the new members of the faculty were Miss A. B. Boyd, a graduate of Wooster University, now Mrs. C. M. Ritchie, of Fairmont, and Miss Mary E. Knight, now Mrs. George Price, of this city. For two or three years Francis Brown had been the teacher of elocution.

Professor Roemer served but one year, being succeeded by Prof. J. C. Gwynn, of Wheeling, who also served but one year, being succeeded by J. Walter Barnes, who had been a member of the school since the spring of 1885, and assistant principal since the fall of 1889. During Professor Gwynn's administration there were eight regular faculty members and seven student assistants, Miss Eliza Hayden, of Fairmont, having charge of the music.

Miss Irene T. Meyer, a teacher with a forceful personality, was assistant principal. Another member of the largely increased faculty was Miss Ella Miller, now Mrs. W. S. Neayers, of this city.

The school with the passing years had been steadily growing until now it had practically outgrown its quarters, and largely through the efforts of Professor Barnes, sentiment for a new building was aroused. On March 9, 1891, the Legislature passed a bill providing for the sale of the state's interest in the old building for $15,000, and appropriating $20,000 additional for the erection of a new Normal School building.

In February, 1892, at the city of Charleston, the contract for the new building was let; on June 14 following, the cornerstone was laid with imposing ceremonies, and on March 27, 1893, the school took possession of its new home, in its present quarters.

With new buildings, new equipment and a large and strong faculty, together with Professor Barnes' energy and fruitful advertising, the school grew and prospered.

Professor Barnes was in charge of the school until 1901, when he was succeeded by Prof. Marcus B. Ross, a native of Marion County, who for a number of years had been a teacher in Nashville, Tennessee.

Professor Ross entered upon his work with Prof. M. C. Lough as Assistant Principal, and despite considerable opposition from without, closed his first year's work in a satisfactory manner, with the good will of students and faculty. In the autumn of 1902, Professor Ross went hopefully to his task; but soon ill health overtook him, and while struggling bravely against it, and working with unflagging zeal for the school, he succumbed to the disease, and his fine brave spirit passed to the great beyond. This was a blow to the school and a shock to the entire community. Subsequently, an impressive memorial service was held, at which the principal address was made by C. W. Waddell, then a member of the faculty, now a prominent physician of this city. Prof. M. C. Lough became Acting Principal, conducting the school to the end of the year; shortly after this he withdrew from the teaching profession and subsequently went into journalism. During the administration of Professor Ross, Miss Ida Abbot, Prof. E. E. Mercer and Prof. H. F. Rogers became members of the faculty.

In the fall of 1893 Prof. W. L. McCowan, Principal of the West Liberty Normal, was elected Principal of the Fairmont Normal, with Professor Mercer as Assistant Principal. Other members of this faculty were Miss Mable Moderwell, Prof. W. R. Shaw, Miss Mollie Virginia Smith and Miss Willa Hart Butcher, a graduate of the West Virginia University. Miss Butcher was teacher of Greek and Latin, and a leading member of the faculty. The Departments of Music, of Art, and of Expression were all operative under skilled teachers.

An insisently growing demand for trained teachers began now to make its impression on West Virginia educators, and Prof. T. C. Miller, State Superintendent of Schools, with the co-operation of the other members of the Board of Regents, decided to establish a Department of Education in the Fairmont Normal School, and accordingly in the spring of 1905, Professor Miller secured Miss Isabel Davenport, a post-graduate student of Columbia University, to be the head of that department.

The following autumn Professor McCowan was succeeded by Prof. U. S. Fleming as Principal. Professor Fleming, while not in robust health, entered enthusiastically upon his duties, determined to meet the demand for professionally trained teachers, and to place the Normal School once more in the ranks of a real training school. Miss Davenport continued at the head of the Department of Education, and in the spring of 1906, a "Model School" of two grades was organized, with Miss Rowland, of Wisconsin, as expert teacher, all student teachers being under the immediate supervision of Miss Davenport. While the "Model School" had but two grades, it was a model school.

This same year another step in advance was taken through Professor Miller's zeal for his alma mater, in the erection and furnishing of the Woman's Hall. This building was occupied for the first time in the spring of 1906, and Miss Mollie Virginia Smith was placed in charge of the young women occupants.

The next year, 1907, Miss Davenport was transferred to the principalship of the Concord Normal School. Mrs. Morrow, who had resumed teaching the spring previous, was placed in charge of the educational department, with Miss Mary E. George, of New York, in charge of the "Model School" as expert teacher.

The last year of Professor Fleming's administration was an incessant struggle on his part against disease, and at the end of the year, his health continuing to fail, he resigned, and Dr. C. J. C. Bennett was elected in his stead, with J. G. Rohrbaugh as Assistant and teacher of Latin and Greek.

Dr. Bennett was an enthusiast for professional training, and bent practically all his energies in the direction of the establishment of a Training Department. Miss Montana Hastings was selected as the head of the department, with Miss Mary E. George as assistant. The "Model School" gave place to a "Practice School," with six grades installed. The following year the regular grades were installed and Miss Anne Austin, now at the head of the Training School in Concord Normal, was elected as one of Miss Hastings' assistants, subsequently Professor Rohrbaugh was transferred to the principalship of Glenville Normal, and Miss George later became his training teacher.

The Training Department touched a responsive chord in the hearts of young men and women ambitious to be teachers, and there was a largely increased attendance of students. Dr. Bennett further showed a progressive spirit in the inauguration of a summer school.

During the three years of Dr. Bennett's administration there had been several changes in the faculty; Professor Rohrbaugh's place was filled by Professor Stooksbury; Dr. A. J. Davis, Professor Beer, Professor Scherf and Miss Elizabeth Stalnaker had been added to the teaching force, together with Miss Mayme Ware, of Huntington, as teacher of Expression. At the beginning of Dr. Bennett's second year, Professor Scherf resigned to accept a position in the East, and the vacancy was filled by Prof. H. F. Rogers.

At the close of the school year June, 1910, Dr. Bennett

NEW NORMAL SCHOOL SITE

resigned to accept a position in the University of Oregon. To succeed him, the Board of Regents elected Prof. O. I. Woodley, of New Jersey, as president, with Professor Stooksbury as Assistant. Recently Prof. Chester P. Higby was elected to the position of Assistant President. Professor Stooksbury having resigned at the beginning of this year to take a position in Savannah, Georgia.

If Dr. Bennett was enthusiastic concerning the training school, Professor Woodley is equally so, with the advantage of having been for years closely connected with the public schools.

This is now the fourth year of his connection with the school, and there has been great improvement in the better organization of the school, in the standard of scholarship, and in the evolution of the training school toward the more nearly ideal.

The prospect for the Fairmont Normal School was never brighter. The recent Legislature authorized the sale of the present building, the purchase of a new site, and the erection in the not remote future of a substantial building adequate to the needs of a professional school for teachers is assured.

NEW NORMAL SCHOOL SITE.

During the past school year the Board of Control sold the present school property and purchased twelve acres of ground at the Corner of Locust Avenue and the Mannington Street car line. Plans are now being drawn, and during the coming year a new building will be erected. It is expected the buildings on this new site will make one of the finest school plants in the State. This change means very much for the future of the Fairmont Normal School. All of its friends believe that the Board of Control has acted wisely in the matter.

LIBRARY.

"The true University is a collection of books."—Carlyle.

The alumni library, started about twenty years ago by the Alumni Association, formed the nucleus of the present library. Books have been added during the recent years, until now it contains about 5,000 catalogued volumes (this does not include government reports, of which there are over 2,000) and is especially complete in the departments of pedagogy, history, literature and economics.

The library has been selected with great care and every subject is represented by the best standard works. This enables the teacher to give breadth to his teaching, and each student to broaden his scholarship by comparative reading. The number of reference books is also large and carefully selected to meet the needs of real teaching and scholarship.

The library has a large number of the best periodicals. It is a good thing for the students to look over the contents of all the best ones each month as they come in and read the few articles in each one which appeal to him. But he should select some one first rate worthy newspaper, as the Outlook or Literary Digest, to read carefully, so that he may keep intelligently abreast of the times. Spending, however, very much time in reading the magazines, especially the stories, is largely a waste; better put the time on a good solid book.

"The library may be known as the solemn chamber in which a man can take courses of all that have been wise and great and good and glorious amongst the men that have gone before him."—G. Dawson.

The library is open from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. and from 6:30 to 7:30 of every school day, and from 9 A. M. to 12 M. on Saturday.

Books may be retained two weeks, and renewed for the same length of time, provided there is no special demand for them; such as are needed for class-room work are limited to one night.

Every book must be charged at the librarian's desk before being taken from the room; when it is returned, the borrower should see that the charge is cancelled.

Conversation and conduct inconsistent with quiet and order are prohibited in the library and adjoining halls, not only during school hours but at all times when the library is open.

Magazines are not to be taken from the library during the month for which they are issued.

The student should soon familiarize himself with the card catalog by means of which he can readily find if a certain book is in the library and just where it is.

A fine of three cents per day will be charged for books kept more than two weeks.

Periodicals and Newspapers.

A carefully selected list of magazines and periodicals is furnished by the school, and become a part of the reference library. The following constitutes the list for the year 1913 and 1914:

PERIODICALS: American Historical Review; Atlantic Monthly; Biblical World; Bulletin of Pan-American Union; Craftsman; Current Opinion; Educational Review; Elementary School Teacher; History Teachers' Magazine; Household Arts Magazine; Independent Journal of Education; Journal of Geography; Journal of Home Economics; Kindergarten Review; Ladies' Home Journal; Literary Digest; Life and Health; Normal Instructor; North American Review; Outlook; Primary Education; Review of Reviews; School and Home Education; School Arts; School Review; Scribner's Magazine; Survey; Teachers' College Record; Travel Magazine; Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature.

NEWSPAPERS: Wheeling Intelligencer; New York Times; Evening Post; Parkersburg Dispatch-News; Charleston Mail; Weekly Inter-Mountain (Elkins); Grafton Leader; Preston County Journal (Kingwood); State Journal (Parkersburg); Review-Journal (Romney); Philippi Republican; Wetzel Democrat (New Martinsville); West Union Record;

The Times (London); Womans' Journal; The Post (Berkeley Springs); Star-Tribune; Weekly Globe and Farm; The Fruit Grower; National Stockman and Farmer; West Virginia Farmer.

STUDENT BODY.

The entire school is organized into an association known as the Student Body. It fills an important place in the general work of the Normal School. Through this organization, receptions are arranged, the Lecture Course directed, and many other special services as they arise from time to time are rendered. A Student Body fee of $2.00 a year is required of all students. This covers the expenses for receptions, flowers and additional expenses of the Student Body. It also entitles the student to a ticket for all numbers in the regular Lecture Course. It is paid at the time the tuition is paid at the beginning of each semester. The students also assess themselves a penny a week with which to purchase music for the Victrola and other purposes.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

In the early history of the school two literary societies were organized, which have had a great influence in the growth and development of the school. The Lyceum Society was organized in 1872, and the Mozart Society in 1874. Since that time these societies have been active and have exerted a positive, constructive influence upon the lives of many Normal School students.

Any student of the Normal School is eligible to membership in these societies. They meet regularly each Friday evening. The programs are varied in character, and thus meet the varying abilities of the different students. Vocal and instrumental music, declamations, readings, orations, and debates are given with sufficient frequency to enable the students to get practice and the growth and confidence that comes with practice.

There is a good healthy rivalry between the two societies, which without doubt is an important factor in their activity and vigor. During the commencement season, the annual contest between the two societies is held. This is regarded as the greatest school event of the year, one which fills the spacious auditorium full to overflowing.

ATHLETICS.

Athletics is an important part in the life of the students in the Normal School. The past year has probably been the most successful year in Athletics that the school has had. At the opening of school in September, it was announced that clean athletics would be the rule here, and that no student would be permitted to play who was not a regularly enrolled student, taking full and regular work, and who was not in good standing in his work at the time of the contest. Any school that does not put its athletics on this basis is not just to the principles for which the school ought to stand. Athletics as conducted in many schools is the most immoral feature about them, and any school which bases its standard on the success of its athletic teams, and which constantly certifies incorrectly to the good standing and integrity of the team members, is working a personal injury to the members of the team itself, and to the school as a whole.

Basket ball, baseball and track athletics are the fields of athletic activity. Basket ball probably is the most important from the students' standpoint. This is due to the class teams, both boys and girls, and the class contests which take place. A very spirited rivalry exists between the classes, and so the class competitions are as keen as between the regular team and visiting teams.

Athletics properly directed and combined with gymnasium work, may be of great service to students and to the institution. Plans are being developed for giving gymnasium work, for which credit will be given. Learning how to take care of and handle the body is as valuable information as that which is gathered from any other source, so credit should be given for regular work and instruction in the gymnasium the same as for other subjects. Each girl who enters in September should plan to provide herself with a gymnasium suit of dark blue material, so that she can be ready for this work.

MUSIC.

The music work of the Fairmont Normal School is designed to accomplish three purposes. Through study and interpretation of carefully selected music, vocal and instrumental, a love and appreciation for music is developed within the souls of the students. By means of the Victrola, selections from great choruses and operas are studied and used also as the center for the interpretation of the choruses and operas. By the same means, also, the great instrumental and voice selections are produced as interpreted by the world's great performers. This is a very fruitful and efficient method for establishing standards of music and standards of musical interpretation.

Much attention is given to chorus work. This affords opportunity to express the self musically through the best compositions, which very much broadens musical feeling and judgment. So well has this work been done that it can be truthfully said that the students of the Fairmont Normal School enjoy music when interpreted for them, or when they have an opportunity to interpret for themselves.

In addition to the music work mentioned above, very competent instruction is given in voice training and on the piano. This instruction is not included in the tuition, but is done by personal arrangement with the instructors. The Normal School has several pianos, which are placed at the disposal of students for practice without additional cost.

All students who cannot read music, or who have not studied music, are required to do class work, in which the meaning of musical terms and phrases is carefully explained and much practice given in reading simple music as a preparation for the musical interpretation in the chorus work spoken of above. Regular credit is given for this work, the same as for other subjects in the course.

DORMITORY SITTING ROOMS

LECTURES AND ENTERTAINMENTS.

No school in the State has more fine lectures and entertainments than the Fairmont State Normal School. The following lectures and entertainments have been given during the past year:

Mme. Evelyn Scotney Concert Company.

The Floyds, Magicians.

The International Grand Opera Company.

The Apollo Concert Company.

Albert Edward Wiggam. Subject: "The Cradle and the Nation."

John Merritt Driver. Subject: "America Facing the Far East."

Newell Dwight Hills. Subject: "America: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

SOME RULES AND REGULATIONS.

1. Tuition must be paid upon entrance for the semester.
2. Expenses for room and board in the dormitory must be paid at least weekly in advance.
3. Girls living in the dormitory will not be permitted to receive gentlemen callers Sunday evenings, and only twice during the week at hours designated by the President. One evening each week is to be given to the literary societies, and one other for social purposes. Permission will be granted by the Preceptress as to when and how this evening shall be spent, and the place and the company must be satisfactory to her.
4. All students of the Normal School are expected to give five evenings of each week to study. A continued violation of this rule will be considered sufficient ground for expulsion. Young men frequenting pool rooms, saloons, and other undesirable places, and engaging in practices inconsistent with the purposes of the Normal School, will be asked to withdraw from the institution.
5. Students who represent the school in any athletic event, or in any society entertainment, must be regularly enrolled students taking at least three subjects, and must be in good standing in at least three subjects. This applies particularly to athletics and debates with other schools and to the annual inter-society contests.

6. Students who do not live in the Dormitory or who do not live at home will be expected to conform to the rules relating to study hours and social life. They must secure permission from the President to attend special social functions or to leave the city.

7. It is important that students away from home should have suitable rooms in which to live. In every case the rooms should be in homes of respectability, and where all things are kept orderly and neat. So far as possible, parents should come with their young people and give personal attention to the selection of the place that will be, in a sense, home for the school year. All students before finally engaging rooms must have them approved by the President or some one designated by him.

TUITION AND EXPENSES.

The tuition in the Normal School is $9.00 per year, one-half to be paid at the opening of each semester. There is also a laboratory fee of 50c. for each semester for those who take chemistry, physics, agriculture, or botany, and for those who take cooking $1.00 per semester. A student body fee of $2.00 a year is required of all students. This covers the expenses for receptions, etc. It also entitles the student to a ticket for all numbers in the regular lecture course. Half of this amount is collected at the beginning of each semester when the tuition is paid. It is felt that no other investment brings larger results than the small amount that is put into good concerts, lectures and entertainments. A class fee of 25 cents for each semester will be collected at the time of paying the tuition. The expenses for books for the year is about $10.00. Other expenses for pencils, paper, etc., will probably amount to $5.00. Board in the dormitory, including meals and room rent, ranges from $3.25 to $3.75, depending upon the location of the room. Girls furnish bedding and towels. Rooms for girls can be obtained near the Normal School and meals taken at the Dormitory, making the entire cost $4.50 per week. Board and rooms can be secured in private homes for about the same amount. Young men can secure rooms for $1.00 to $1.50 per week, and by boarding in clubs can make the entire expense for board per week from $3.50 to $4.00. Board and room at private houses can be secured for about $4.50. Table board at the Dormitory is $3.00 per week.

A REAL NORMAL SCHOOL.

A modern Normal School provides three distinct phases of work:

1. A thorough review of the subjects to be taught in the various schools.
2. Thorough courses in Psychology, Pedagogy, Methods, and School Management.
3. A study of the workings of a school system, with much observation and practice work in a well organized training school.

The Fairmont State Normal School probably meets all of these conditions better than any other school in the State. The Normal work is organized entirely with this idea in mind and every effort is put forth to enable the school to meet completely each of these requirements.

To those who are expecting to teach, we would advise that they attend only those schools that meet these requirements. There are many schools which are organized for another purpose that have added Normal Courses, but they fall short of doing the work of a good normal school, and thus the graduates cannot have the broad view of educational work that should characterize every teacher.

By special arrangements with the Board of Education of the City of Fairmont, the Fourth Ward Building is the Training Department of the Normal School. It consists of eight regular grades, each one under the direction of a carefully selected teacher, and the whole under the general direction of an efficient principal. Each of these teachers becomes the critic teacher of the grade in which she teaches. This fact enables the student to observe good examples of teaching, and later to teach under the guidance of one whom they observed at work. The Training School is under the general charge of a superintendent, assisted by the primary supervisor and a grammar grade supervisor. These three persons and the teachers of the Training School make up the Training School Faculty, and we are certain that it is the most efficient group of educational workers in the State.

COURSE OF STUDY.

The standard American Normal School requires for admission a diploma from a four year high school, and the Normal School course consists of two years in advance of this. In our own State the practice has been to give the normal work in four years of attendance, or in one year after graduation from a four year high school, thus, in fact, making the time of preparation for teachers in the State schools much less than in other States. During the past year some additions to the work have been made in the various schools.

The time seems to have come when the Normal Schools of the State should move forward and require work of equal grade with that done in other states. At the opening of school in September 1913, the Fairmont State Normal School started with this idea in mind. Students entering for the first time from four year high schools began the two year's course for graduation. Those entering who were graduates of other than four year high schools were given full credit for the work they had done. This move in the State, we believe, will be a very valuable one for the teachers and for the schools in which they teach. The following courses of study went into effect at the opening of school in September. At a joint meeting of the Board of Regents and the Principals of the Normal Schools, the following plan was adopted as the basis for the Normal School work in West Virginia:

1. The Academic work leading to the Normal Course shall consist of four years, and shall be known as the Secondary Course. Sixteen units of work will be required. This course shall be known, in the several years that compose it, as

The Sophomore Secondary
The Junior Secondary
The Senior Secondary

2. The Normal Course shall consist of two years' work in advance of the Secondary Course, and the years of this course shall be known as

The Junior Normal

The Senior Normal

3. The following were agreed upon as the minimum for the amount of work required in the Secondary Course:

English	4 units
Algebra	1 unit
Geometry	1 unit
History	2 units
Science	2 units
Language	2 units
Manual Arts	1-2 unit
Vocal Music	1-2 unit

The remainder of the 16 units of this course shall be made up by each principal and approved by the Board of Regents.

4. Any student of a first-class four-year High School will be admitted to the Normal Course upon presenting a statement that he has completed 16 units of high school work, and any student of the Secondary course that completes 16 units of work will be admitted to the Normal School courses.

In accordance with the above requirements, the Fairmont Normal School offers the following courses:

In very special cases the President may make other electives or accept certified work from accredited High Schools in subjects not specified in this course.

Graduates of the Secondary Course will not after 1914 be regarded as Normal School graduates but as graduates of the Secondary department of the Normal School.

The Domestic Science Normal Course is the same as the regular Normal Course, with the exception that in the junior year chemistry of foods, bacteriology, domestic science and art are substituted as electives in place of the academic subjects. In the senior year, domestic science and art is substituted for the academic electives, and a part of the training work will be taken in domestic science or art.

Graduates of four year high schools will be admitted to the Normal Course upon presentation of certificate of work from the Principal. Graduates of other than four year high schools will be given credit in the secondary course for all work which has been certified to by their Principal as being equivalent to that ordinarily done in high schools.

Graduates of the full Normal Course will be eligible to teach in any school in the State. Their diplomas will also be accepted in most other States, as the work done will be that of the standard American Normal School.

Those who complete the full Normal Course will receive University credit for about one and two-third years of work. This will make it possible for a student to graduate at the University within two years of graduation from the Normal, by taking summer school work.

This strengthening of the Normal Course is thus an academic advantage, as well as a professional advantage to those who complete the course, as it also makes the diploma of distinct value, because it represents as much work as is given in any regular Normal School.

Pupils who do not desire to take the Normal Course may take the elective subjects, for which credit will be given that work, will be taken in domestic science or art.

will entitle them to University credit. No diploma will be granted such students. Only one diploma will be issued in the Normal department, this will be given to those who complete the Normal Course.

PROFESSIONAL COURSES.

Psychology—One Semester. The aim of this course is to lay the foundation for the scientific study of education, to develop the consciousness of the process and the habit of observing the process, as well as the content of education.

The method is largely inductive at first, beginning with simple introspective and observational problems leading to an appreciation of the fact that the subject matter of psychology is to be found in the mental processes of the teacher and the pupil. This is followed by a more systematic study of reflex, instinctive, and conscious behavior.

General Method—One Semester. This course is intended to present the general principles underlying the teaching process. It is fundamental for all the courses in special method and practice in that it formulates the general principles upon which are based the selection of materials and the methods of presentation. The leading topics are: (1) the meaning and aims of education; (2) the materials of education—a study of the child, his instincts, tendencies, possibilities, perception, attention, and motivation; (3) the forms of instruction; development, drill, appreciation; (4) the use of the lesson plan; (5) the hygiene of instruction; (6) the evolution and function of subject matter; (7) testing results. This course is accompanied by the observation of actual school activities in connection with each subject treated.

History of Education—One year, two periods per week. The aim of this course is to lead the student to an understanding of present educational ideals, principles, problems, and practices; to lead to an appreciation of the dignity of the profession; and to develop a perspective which will give stability and poise in the midst of extreme opinions and fads. To this end the emphasis is placed upon principles and practices rather than upon men, and these principles and practices are studied in the light of their social setting. A brief study is made of primitive education to show its simplest beginnings, then follows a study of Greek and Roman education. The Mediaeval period receives some attention, but the greater part of the time is devoted to the modern period.

Principles of Education—One year, two periods per week. This course is synthetic, gathering up and attempting to formulate the principles underlying the science of education. The most important principles which biology, physiology, psychology, and sociology have contributed to the science of education will be considered and their application to educational problems indicated. The following are some of the topics to be considered: The significance of evolution for education; the aims of education; the evolution of the curriculum and the principles which should underlie the selection of subject matter; the principles underlying the learning process; the maturing of the nervous system, physical growth and development, fatigue, and their bearing on educational problems; principles of moral education. There will be no special text used in this course but extensive library work will be required.

School Administration—One Semester. The first four weeks will be devoted to a consideration of school room management; then will follow a discussion of some of the larger problems as follows: Classification and promotion of pupils, the relation of the school to the home and to the community, the improvement of teachers in practice, the ethics of school craft, special schools for defectives and delinquents, open air schools, the organization of industrial education, sanitary conditions, medical inspection of schools, sources of materials, etc. This course consists of lectures, reports, and discussions.

Special Methods—From two to six weeks is given to each of the subjects taught in the Training School. This instruction is given by the heads of the special departments and the Training School faculty.

General principles and devices for teaching the particular subject are first presented. This is followed by the detailed preparation of specific lessons for actual class work. Emphasis is placed upon lesson plans, materials, and the teacher's preparation.

The class is divided into sections, one receiving instruction in primary work, and the other in that of the upper grades.

Elementary Methods—This course is given only in the spring term and is especially suited to the needs of those students who have been teaching or expect to teach the next year, and have not the courses in psychology, child study, history of education, and principles of teaching. It is the aim of the course to give a few primary laws of learning and of teaching, some fundamental principles of school organization and of school management, and some of the essentials of the recitation and of study.

Teachers' Courses in Public School Subjects—Teachers' Courses in English, Arithmetic, Geography, History, Physiology, Drawing, Nature Study, and Music will be offered during the junior year. Nature Study and Music will be required of all students, and two other subjects to be determined by a test, will also be required. The object of these courses is to give perspective in the subjects taken, to establish methods of study, and to familiarize students with available materials by actual use of the materials.

Training School—The Training School furnishes an opportunity for students to observe the application of the principles of psychology, and of general and special method as they are acquiring these principles in the theoretical courses, and later on to apply their knowledge of these principles in actual practice, thus testing their knowledge and acquiring skill.

The Training School consists of the eight grades below the high school. There is a critic teacher in every room and there are two supervisors. Every Normal School student, before graduation, is required to spend one hour each day for at least eighteen weeks in the Training School beyond the required work in observation during the junior year. More practice will be required if the student seems to need it. Before taking practice, the student must have completed the course in psychology and in General Method. Pupil teachers will be expected to help in the opening exercises and in the mechanics of the school room and playground. Each student teacher will teach at least two subjects, and his practice will be distributed so as to include at least two grades. The assignments of grades are made after a careful study of individual adaptability. As far as possible, the students' preferences will be considered in the assignment of subjects. An outline of the work to be done, together with general instructions as to management and responsibilities will be given each student before he begins his work.

The most thorough academic and pedagogical preparation is required for every lesson taught. Written lesson plans are required during the early part of the work, and these are criticised by a critic teacher and re-constructed by the student before he may teach. Later on reports of lessons are written and the student is asked to criticise his own work in the light of pedagogical principles in order to develop in him the habit of conscious self-improvement. All of the work is under the direct supervision of the critic or supervisor. The hour from three-thirty to four-thirty of every school day, not including Friday, will be reserved for informal critic meetings. During this hour, students may be called and any student can arrange for a personal meeting with critic or supervisor.

HISTORY COURSES.

United States History—This is a secondary school course, fourth year, one semester, four days a week. This course follows in the main the suggestions of the great historical reports. Western and economic history get proper emphasis. Map work, reference work, and reports are required of all taking the course.

Advanced Course in United States History—This is an elective course open to the students of the Normal Department, to be offered during the coming year. A limited period of the nation's history will be studied intensively.

English History—One year, four hours a week. The work in English History more than fulfills the requirements for college entrance. The general aim of the course is to explain the British Empire of to-day. The structure and working of the Imperial Government, English Economic History, and the British Empire receive more than usual recognition. Map work, the making of outlines, and reference work in the library are essential parts of the work.

Advanced Course, Modern Europe—One year, four hours a week. The aim of this course is to explain the present situation of the peoples of European origin. To accomplish this, their development since the days of Louis XIV are followed. In addition to the usual political topics, the intellectual history of the eighteenth century, the commercial, agricultural and industrial revolutions, modern imperialism, and the socialist and humanitarian movements receive adequate recognition. Map work, note taking, and extensive reference work are required of all taking the course. During the entire year, also, each member of the class follows in the great newspapers of the world one contemporary movement, and traces its past history. This course is open only to those who have the equivalent of a four years' high school course.

Ancient History—This course covers the earliest historical periods to the breaking up of the Empire of Charlemagne. Oriental History is studied far enough to explain the beginnings of Greek and Roman History. In the Greek and Roman history as well as in the Oriental, emphasis is placed upon manners, customs, arts, and religion with reference to showing their permanent contributions to civilization.

Text—Reference Readings.

First Semester (First Year)—Oriental and Greek History.

Second Semester (First Year)—Roman History.

Civics—The course in Civics follows, in general, the outline given in Forman's "Advanced Civics." The essential principles of American Government are first taken up, under such topics as "Society and Government," "Types of Government," "Popular Government," "Representative Government," "Constitutional Government," "Federal Government," "Party Government," "Civil and Political Liberty," etc. Then the machinery or organization of our federal and state governments is described, with a discussion of the functions or activities of our government and the practical problems which arise under its administration. Under this head come such topics as "International Relations," "Defense," "Taxation," "Finance," "Commerce," "Elections," "Corporations," "Labor," "Crime," "Charities," etc.

Throughout the course emphasis is laid upon current events and their connection with the points discussed, and upon the idea that instruction in Civics should have for its highest aim the development in the learner of sound notions of political morality.

MATHEMATICS COURSES.

Arithmetic—In Arithmetic the work at first consists of a review of definitions and the fundamental processes to discover the principles involved in and derived from these processes. Thoroughness in elementary processes and principles is insisted upon. The subsequent work is so arranged as to show the unity of the subject—to show that, though the terms used and the processes may vary, the underlying principles are all the same. Most of the students are to become teachers and this work is intended to help them in their teaching and to give foundation for their study of the best methods of presenting the subject.

Algebra—In Algebra special attention is at first given to the elementary processes and principles, and the application of these to the solution of simple problems by means of the equation, definitions being given as needed. Much attention is given to factoring—emphasis being placed upon a few distinct types—the basis upon which the greatest part of Algebra is built. In connection with simultaneous linear equation the graph is introduced, special attention being given to two methods of elimination. Quadratic equations are introduced through factoring. This is followed by the completion of the square, the outcome of which is the formula derived from the general quadratic equation—a formula so important that it should be fixed in the mind for use in the subsequent part of the subject. The logic of elementary Algebra is studied in connection with equivalent equation and extraneous roots. The year's work includes also a study of the theory of exponents and radical.

Plane Geometry—The work in geometry is begun by requiring the student to observe and construct the elementary geometric forms, and in this connection to learn the definitions. A clear conception of these is essential to an understanding of geometry, as they form the basis of the subject. One of the chief objects of the study of geometry is to cultivate the habit of close observation, of comparison, of exact logical thinking, and of clear, accurate expression. To secure all this, the theorems in the text are used, after which many exercises are furnished to test the student's ability to apply the principles learned from the demonstration. One year is given to plane geometry. Solid geometry may be elected.

Trigonometry—In this course the trigonometric functions are first defined and learned as ratios, but representation by lines is also introduced at the beginning, since some parts of the subject can be treated more simply by the line method, or by a combination of the two, than by the ratio method alone. In dealing with the fundamental series of the subject, the ideas and requirements of modern mathematics are recognized, and the design for equipping the student for more advanced work in a college course is kept in mind. The elementary formulas are studied in groups and proved, and from these other important formulas are derived, special emphasis to those essential to the solution of triangles. Application of these is given in a large number of exercises.

Solid Geometry—In solid geometry methods are used similar to those employed in plane geometry, as pupils were at first taught to see figures in one plane, so now they must be taught to visualize solids from a flat drawing. In considering the propositions in solid geometry, constant reference is made to corresponding propositions in plane geometry. This adds interest to the subject by keeping the familiar connected with what is strange and creates some approach to power in the discovery of new facts in relation to figures of three dimensions.

BIOLOGICAL SCIENCE.

Biology—This work begins with a microscopic study of unicellular life, a special study of the morphology and physiology of the cell. The characteristic differences of animal and plant life are shown, and a brief survey is made of the evolutionary development of organisms into higher forms. Some attention is given to economic entomology. The work is intended to vitalize the subject of biology and open the eyes and mind of the student to the relationship of organic life met in his environment.

Botany. Class, Laboratory, and Field Work—This course is designed to especially fit the student to take up the subject of agriculture and to help him in nature study work. A brief review is given of the life and processes of the lower plant life from an economic standpoint. Detailed microscopic studies of plant tissues are made and a general knowledge of structure, feeding habits and effect of environment is given. Enough work is done in systematic botany to acquaint the student with the characteristics of the more common families of plants.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Physiology and Hygiene—This course aims to give to teachers up-to-date scientific ideas both as regards subject matter and methods of teaching. Special effort is made to present this subject attractively and to lay emphasis upon aspects of the subject most worth while. Anatomy is taught only as a means toward teaching the more practical and interesting knowledge of physiological processes and their application to hygiene.

Lecture demonstrations and a few individual laboratory experiments are given.

AGRICULTURE.

Elementary Agriculture—This course is especially designed for the country teacher and the beginner in Agriculture. The active practical work of agriculture is carried on with the theoretical work. By means of field trips, laboratory work and readings, a study of the formation and value of the various soils is made and the best methods of improvement and care are given. The elementary principles of seed selection, planting, cultivation, etc., are carried out in a practical way. Attention is given to animal husbandry, dairying, and practical farm management.

Advanced Agriculture—This work is designed more especially for the student who finishes the Normal Course and is preparing for college work. Botany and Chemistry are prerequisites. The real problems of the West Virginia farmer are taken up in the most practical way. Seed selection, testing, harvesting and storing of grains and forage crops, feeding and care of farm animals, and the ordinary practical principles of dairying are features of the work. The care and value of manures, use of fertilizers, soil studies and preparation, planting and care of the orchard are made clear by actual demonstration. Special emphasis is given to the nature and control of the common pests and diseases of farm crops. Four class periods and five hours of laboratory each work are required.

Some good text is taken as a basis, but constant use is made of government bulletins, farm journals, and other related reading matter.

PHYSICAL SCIENCE.

Physical Geography—This subject is presented under the sub-heads of the earth as a planet, the land, the sea; the atmosphere, life, and the relation of Physical Geography to other subjects, as Physics, Astronomy, History, Geology, Agriculture, Forestry, Botany, etc.

Besides the use of a text, there are required readings and reports. Excursions are made and much emphasis is placed on first-hand knowledge. There is no other subject that has a more wholesome, broadening effect than Physical Geography.

Elementary General Physics—This subject continues throughout the year. It consists of the usual divisions: Mechanics of liquids, solids, and gases; Heat, Electricity, Sound and Light. Numerous class-room demonstrations are given, and an enthusiastic interest is maintained. Individual laboratory work is made a strong feature of the course. The phenomena of physics are met with on every hand in our every day lives, and though often direct and simple, are comparatively little thought about or understood by people who have no training in physics. This course is a great aid in the interpretation of the physical forces about us. The educational value of this study is very great. Recitations four hours a week; laboratory work two hours a week.

Elementary General Chemistry—This course extends throughout the school year. It is accompanied by a large amount of laboratory work, giving the student first hand knowledge of materials and chemical reactions upon which the theoretical work of the class-room is based. Chemistry touches life on every side but unless a good foundation is laid it will not be very useful. Just enough theory, therefore, is taught to give unity and usefulness to the body of facts presented. We especially emphasize applications of chemistry to explanations of phenomena of physiology and hygiene, domestic arts, agriculture, and the industries of our own State.

Household Chemistry, with Physical Introduction—This course is open only to students who have had a year of general chemistry. Many important fundamental principles of physics which pertain to domestic arts are introduced, such as thermometry, heat measurements, domestic uses of electricity, heating, ventilating, illuminating, etc. Much of the course will be devoted to the chemistry of food and nutrition, cleansing and purifying processes, water and sanitation, detection of harmful adulterants and preservatives, generalizations regarding use of antiseptics, use of antiseptics and disinfectants. The chemistry of paints, oils, dyes, soaps, textiles, etc., will be treated in a practical and scientific manner. This course will be accompanied by considerable individual laboratory work.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE COURSES.

Foods I and II—A course in the selection and preparation of food. Typical foods are studied, and the ideas gained in the discussion of their sources, properties, uses and preparation are impressed upon the minds of the pupils by practical work. Thoughtful spending is encouraged when food value and cost are compared, special attention being paid to making the simple, inexpensive foods attractive and nourishing.

Foods III—One semester's credit. A few weeks in the beginning will be devoted to the subject of fruit and vegetable preservation. Some advanced work in regular cooking problems will be given, with attention paid to the calorific value of foods, invalid cookery, and some general work in diatetics.

Household Management—One-half unit credit. This course will take up such problems of home life as division of income, care of household linen, kitchen furnishings, household accounts, general laundry principles, and such others as time will permit.

Observation and Teaching—The observation and teaching work in this course will be in domestic science. The second term of special methods will take up the planning of courses of study for domestic science work in the grades.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE COURSE.

FRENCH—First Year.—Grammar, reading, and constant practice in pronunciation and conversation. Stress is laid upon the pronoun and verb. Chardenal's Complete French Course, and Aldrich and Foster's French Grammar.

Second Year—Advanced grammar, composition, translation, and dictation. Chardenal's Advanced French Course; Lamartine's Graziella; George Sand's La Petite Fadette; Merimee's Colomba; Dumas' La Tulipe Noire.

Third Year—History of the Classical Period of the Seventeenth Century. Selected works from Descartes, Pascal, Corneille, Racine, LaFontaine and Moliere.

GERMAN—First Year.—Pronunciation, grammar, reading of short stories, elementary composition, and conversation. Vos Essentials of German, or Fraser and Von der Smissen's Grammar; Super's Reader; Ein Sommer in Deutschland; Immensee; Hoher als die Kirche.

Second Year—Rapid reading of German prose and poetry; translation of English prose into German; discussion of grammatical points in connection with the translation; study of irregular verbs; dictation; composition; Der Neffe als Onkel; Die Journalisten; Willhelm Tell; Hermann und Dorothea; Minna von Barnhelm; Bacon's Prose Composition.

Third Year—History of German Literature, and study of the biographies of the classical authors. Selected works of Goethe, Lessing, Schiller, Kleist.

Latin—Recognizing that the study of Latin by those who are preparing to teach is important, the relation of Latin to English is held in mind; similarities in constructions are noted and attention given to the derivation of English words from Latin roots. The first year is spent in drills in pronunciation, quantity, accent, the study of forms, vocabulary, and constructions. In nearly every lesson exercises in translating English into Latin and Latin into English are given. These exercises lead to a mastery of forms and principles that make the study of Caesar an easy task.

The second year's work is given to the mastery of Caesar, the third to Cicero, and the fourth to Virgil. Other classics may be substituted for parts of the authors named.

The aim of the study of Latin should be the acquirement both of intrinsic and of disciplinary values, and this twofold aim is held constantly in mind.

ENGLISH COURSES.

The general aims of the course in English are three; to study a number of prose and poetic masterpieces of English and American authors, with the aim of introducing the student to representative literature, in training him in critical and appreciative powers, and assisting him in forming proper reading habits; to train the student in writing and speaking clear, natural, idiomatic English in the elementary schools. The course consists of six years' work, which is divided into two divisions: Secondary and Normal.

Secondary Course in English.

First Year—The specific aim of this year's work is to give the students grounding in literature and writing and speaking. The literature read will consist of myths, fables, fairy stories, and other kinds of "foundation literature," both in prose and poetry. There is much reading aloud in class. Each student is required to read one book on the outside each month, and to make an oral report to the teacher. The work in language consists of written and oral paragraphs and compositions in Narration and Exposition, in connection with the study of a text. The formal elements in speaking and writing are emphasized during the year. Spelling is taught through the composition work done and by means of definite drills. Students have frequent private conferences with their teacher.

Second Year—The basis of this year's work is practical prose Rhetoric. The work consists of study of a text, once a week; of composition work, twice a week; literature, twice a week. In Rhetoric work is made practical, the emphasis being placed on the fundamental qualities of good writing and speaking; outlining, working up material, paragraphing, unity and coherence, and ease and expressiveness. The Composition work consists of both oral and written composing. It correlates closely with the work in Rhetoric. All four forms of discourse are taken up, and letter-writing is carried on throughout the year. The literature for the year is a study of Prose Types—the short story, the novel and the essay—which are correlated with the Rhetoric and Composition work. Each student is required to read assigned literature on the outside and make oral reports to the teacher. Some newspapers and current magazines are discussed.

Third Year—The basis of this year's work is literature: the study of Poetic Types—the Epic, the Lyric, the Drama. The rhetoric of poetry is closely studied, to the end that the student may have bases for his appreciation. Some of the poetry in current magazines is read and criticized, and the drama is studied in the local theaters. Expositions, either written or oral, are required once a week or oftener, usually on subjects drawn from the work in literature. Letter-writing, with special emphasis on the Familiar Letter, is made a part of the year's work. Book reviews and long topics on assigned topics are required at the pleasure of the teacher.

Fourth Year—The work of this year consists of the study of literature by periods. Some of the great literature—both prose and poetry—of the historical periods in English and American literature is read—some of it closely, some of it rapidly. The aim of this work is to familiarize the student with the leading characteristics of the different writers and periods, by reading the literature. The teacher supplements this by lectures and discussions, and by assigning topics for special study. These assigned topics make up the composition work of the year. No text in History of Literature is studied; the students are expected to compile one by means of their reading, study of special topics, and the teacher's lectures.

NORMAL COURSES IN ENGLISH.

Junior Year—Two courses are offered throughout the year. The first consists of Advanced Grammar and Advanced Composition. In the advanced grammar, a history of the English language and the science of grammar is studied, with the aim of making the student acquainted with the growth of the language through the different periods, and the English grammar as the logical and scientific basis of thought. The composition work consists of both oral and written composing. The oral compositions consists of debates and expositions on subjects drawn from life and experience. The written work consists in the writing and discussion of short stories and letters. Personal conferences between student and teacher are held.

The other course is based upon a study of English prose fiction, the contemporary realistic novel serving as a starting point. The aim is to lead the student to judge these novels, first of all, as studies of such social conditions as they themselves know. The study proceeds from the later novelists to those of earlier periods. Methods of portraying character, elements of plot structure, the significance of setting, and qualities of style, are brought to the student's attention by contrast and comparison. A representative novel of each of the following authors is read and discussed somewhat in detail: Howells, Hardy, Meredith, Stevenson, George Eliot, Thackeray, Mrs. Gaskell, Dickens, Hawthorne, Scott, Jane Austin, and Goldsmith. Frequent reference is made to critical essays, especially those in which novelists have given their own theories of their art. The work in composition is directed chiefly toward increasing the student's appreciation of literary values.

Senior Year—Two courses are offered throughout the year. The first consists of a study of the principles and practice of teaching English in the elementary school. Reading, literature, spelling, grammar, language, and composition work are all taken up, together with story telling and dramatization. The students put into practice the theories advanced by teaching classes in the model school. The sole aim of the course is to fit the students to become good teachers of English in the elementary schools.

The other course consists of the close study of two authors, the ones for 1914-15 being Tennyson and Carlyle. The work consists of much reading from the authors, lectures on their lives and characteristics, discussions, and reports on assigned readings. The emphasis is put upon the authors as interpreters and moulders of modern thought, upon the qualities of their art, and upon the social and cultural values of their work.

DRAWING AND DOMESTIC ART.

Drawing. Two hours a week throughout the year, is based upon the text, High School Art Education.

The course outlined is as follows: Composition, line, mass, light and shade, pose, perspective, geometric drawing, design, historic art and ornament, modern artists.

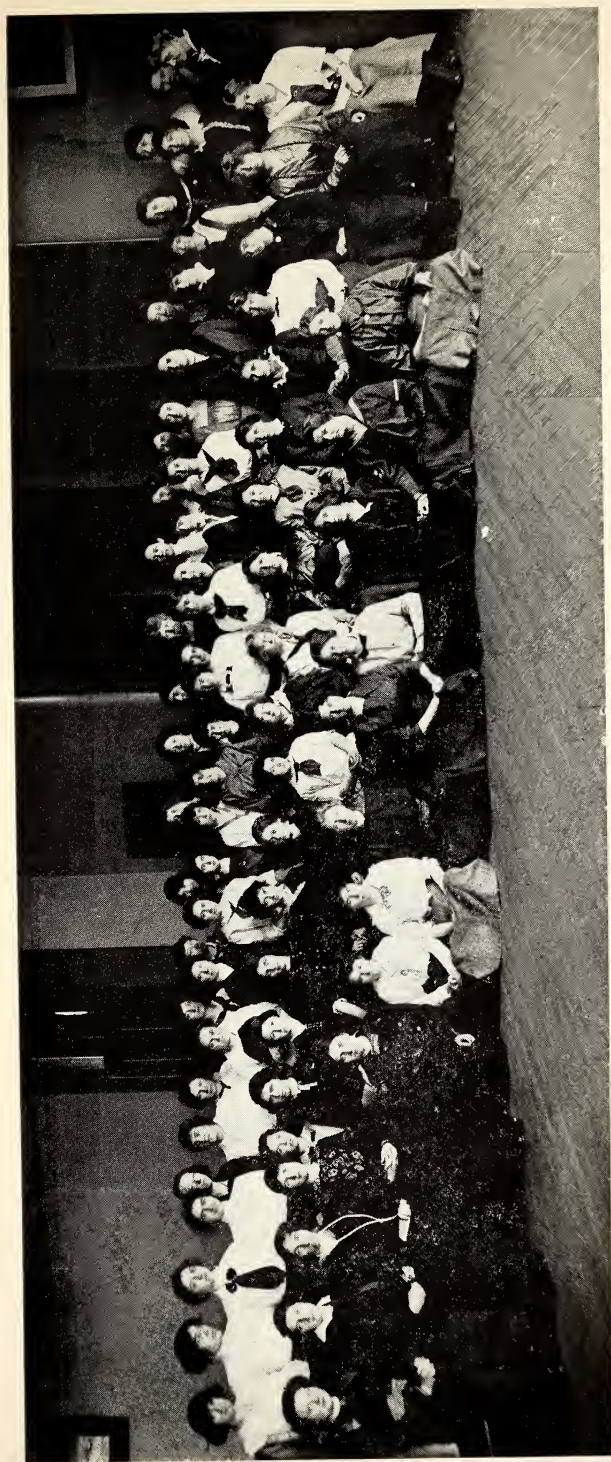

Design. The course in design takes up the various sources of motifs and decorative coloring, making application in household decoration, as pottery, wall paper, china, cushions, draperies, tile, etc. This course is preparatory to the work in household arts.

Household Arts. Two periods a week during the second semester of the junior year. The course includes home plans and decoration, furnishings, styles of furniture, tapestries, linens, porcelains, pictures. The aim of the course is to enable the student to make the best economic and artistic selection from the familiarity with as many commercial articles as possible. The merchants co-operate with us in showing lines of goods, and manufacturers give information concerning the method of manufacture, sources of materials, etc.

Sewing. Two hours a week throughout the year. This course will be offered to students of both secondary and normal courses. It will take up the various stitches in plain sewing, muslin work, and the adaptation of commercial patterns. It is especially planned for beginners in this art.

HISTORY.

Provisions for the establishment of the Fairmont State Normal School were made by the State Legislature of 1867, and an appropriation was provided for the inauguration of the work of the school. In the Act providing for the school, its purpose was declared to be that of educating and training teachers in the improved methods of instruction and discipline that would be of the best service to the common schools of the State. For nearly fifty years the Normal School has striven to carry forward the purpose of its founders. Hundreds of young men and women have been enrolled as students, and felt the influence of the instruction which has been given, and hundreds have been graduated and are engaged in the different vocations of the State, and exerting wide influence in public affairs. From the beginning, the Normal School gave prominence to the idea of teacher training, with the result that the graduates of the school have taken many places of prominence in the educational work of the State. The men and women whose names have appeared in the list of faculties have been widely known for their ability and scholarship, and the instruction which has been given by them has been far reaching in its effects.

In material equipment, the Normal School has made steady advancement. In 1872 an appropriation was made by the State Legislature for the erection of a new building in conjunction with the local Board of Education. This building was completed and occupied in June, 1873. For many years the building, standing at the corner of Main and Quincy Streets housed both the Normal School and the Public Schools of Fairmont. The old building, though abandoned for school purposes, still stands. It will give way in the near future to modern business buildings.

In the year 1893, the Normal School was moved into the present building. This was an important step in the historical development of the institution. At the time of its erection, the present building was considered among the best in the State, and it has served the needs of the school well from that time to the present. Next year it is to be abandoned for school purposes, and the Normal School will again move to larger grounds and a more commodious building.

During all the years of its existence the Fairmont State Normal School has exerted a positive influence in the life of the community and the State. Its graduates have gone out into the world inspired with high ideals, and with a genuine spirit of service. It may be truly said that the history of the institution is recorded in the hearts of the young men and women who have enjoyed the privileges and opportunities that the Normal School provides. Its past history is full of accomplishments and service, and its future is bright with prospects of still greater achievements.

LOCATION.

The Fairmont State Normal School is located at Fairmont, W. Va., on the Monongahela River, near the junction of the Tygarts Valley and West Fork Rivers. It is on the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and at the terminus of the Monongahela Valley Railroad. It may be reached on the Monongahela Valley Traction Co. inter-urban lines from Weston, Clarksburg, Mannington, and Fairview. No city in the State is more easy of access to a larger number of people than Fairmont. This makes it an especially desirable location for an educational institution.

Fairmont is a progressive and growing city, and it provides many advantages and opportunities to the young men and women who come to the Normal School as students. All of the leading denominations have attractive churches whose privileges are open to all students. The social and civic life of the community is inspiring and helpful to young people. The City of Fairmont has a well organized highly developed system of public schools. Aside from the training school advantages which are provided, students have many opportunities of visiting and inspecting the public school work of the City and vicinity where they may see the best examples of good schools and good teaching.

Fairmont is also a healthy City. Great efforts have been made in recent years to put it in a perfectly sanitary condition. There is little sickness in the community, and with reasonable care, no student need have any fear concerning his health. The social life of the community is attractive and helpful. Besides the regular Normal Lecture Course, there are many musical and literary entertainments provided by different organizations of the City each year. All of these conditions make Fairmont an ideal place for a Normal School.

THE NEW NORMAL SCHOOL.

The faculty and students of the Normal School are greatly pleased over the fact that they are to have a new building in which to work next year. The old building has many pleasant associations. Hundreds of students have caught a new vision of life within its walls, but it is plainly inadequate for the present demands of the Normal School. Sentiment and tender associations must yield and be reconciled to the new and better building.

The new building will be a fine example of architecture, probably the finest among the school buildings of the State. It will also be a practical building for school work. It will prove that it is possible to combine good architecture and practical work in the same building. It will also prove that a good building of fine architectural quality can be built at as low a cost as any other kind of building, for architecture, after all, is but right proportions of lines. It will stand on a beautiful campus of eighteen and one-half acres.

The building will be of classic design, 265 feet long, 65 feet wide, and three stories in height. The outside walls will be of light brick, trimmed with limestone and terra cotta. The eight fluted Corinthian Columns in front will be of Indiana limestone, the wood trim throughout the building will be of quarter sawed oak. From its fine site, it will present an imposing appearance, and is sure to be the pride of the school, the city, and the State. It will be ready for occupancy September, 1916.

The building will contain a fine auditorium, large library, study halls, society rooms, rooms for domestic science and domestic art, biological laboratory, chemical and physical laboratory, two science lecture rooms, music rooms, offices, manual training, lunch rooms, and general recitation rooms. When it has moved into its new home, the Fairmont Normal School will enter upon the greatest period in its history.

LIBRARY.

"The true University is a collection of books."—Carlyle.

The alumni library, started about twenty years ago by the Alumni Association, formed the nucleus of the present library. Books have been added during the recent years, until now it contains about 5,000 catalogued volumes (this does not include government reports, of which there are over 2,000) and is especially complete in the departments of pedagogy, history, literature and economics.

The library has been selected with great care and every subject is represented by the best standard works. This enables the teacher to give breadth to his teaching, and each student to broaden his scholarship by comparative reading. The number of reference books is also large and carefully selected to meet the needs of real teaching and scholarship.

The library has a large number of the best periodicals. It is a good thing for the students to look over the contents of all the best ones each month as they come in and read the few articles in each one which appeal to him. But he should select some one first rate worthy newspaper, as the Otlook or Literary Digest, to read carefully, so that he may keep intelligently abreast of the time. Spending, however, very much time in reading the magazines, especially the stories, is largely a waste; better put the time on a good solid book.

MISS DORCAS M. PRICHARD,
Dean of Women.

"The library may be known as the solemn chamber in which a man can take courses of all that have been wise and great and good and glorious amongst the men that have gone before him."—G. Dawson.

The library is open from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. and from 6:30 to 7:30 of every school day, and from 9 A. M. to 12 M. on Saturday.

Books may be retained two weeks, and renewed for the same length of time, provide dthere is no special demand for them; such as are needed for class-room work are limited to one night.

Every book must be charged at the librarian's desk before being taken from the room; when it is returned, the borrower should see that the charge is cancelled.

Conversation and conduct inconsistent with quiet and order are prohibited in the library and adjoining halls, not only during school hours but at all times when the library is open.

Magazines are not to be taken from the library during the month for which they are issued.

The student should soon familiarize himself with the card catalog by means of which he can readily find if a certain book is in the library and just where it is.

A fine of three cents per day will be charged for books kept more than two weeks.

Periodicals and Newspapers.

A carefully selected list of magazines and periodicals is furnished by the school, and become a part of the reference library. The following constitutes the list for the year 1913 and 1914:

PERIODICALS: American Historical Review; Atlantic Monthly; Biblical World; Bulletin of Pan-American Union; Craftsman; Current Opinion; Educational Review; Elementary School Teacher; History Teachers' Magazine; Household Arts Magazine; Independent Journal of Education; Journal of Geography; Journal of Home Economics; Kindergarten

Review; Ladies' Home Journal; Literary Digest; Life and Health; Normal Instructor; North American Review; Outlook; Primary Education; Review of Reviews; School and Home Education; School Arts; School Review; Scribner's Magazine; Survey; Teachers' College Record; Travel Magazine; Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature.

NEWSPAPERS: Wheeling Intelligencer; New York Times; Evening Post; Parkersburg Dispatch-News; Charleston Mail; Weekly Inter-Mountain (Elkins); Grafton Leader; Preston County Journal (Kingwood); State Journal (Parkersburg); Review-Journal (Romney); Philippi Republican; Wetzel Democrat (New Martinsville); West Union Record; The Times (London); Womans' Journal; The Post (Berkeley Springs); Star-Tribune; Weekly Globe and Farm; The Fruit Grower; National Stockman and Farmer; West Virginia Farmer.

STUDENT BODY.

The entire school is organized into an association known as the Student Body. It fills an important place in the general work of the Normal School. Through this organization, receptions are arranged, the Lecture Course directed, and many other special services as they arise from time to time are rendered. A Student Body fee of $2.50 a year is required of all students. This covers the expenses for receptions, flowers and additional expenses of the Student Body. It also entitles the student to a ticket for all numbers in the regular Lecture Course. It is paid at the time the tuition is paid at the beginning of each semester. The students also assess themselves a penny a week with which to purchase music for the Victrola and other purposes.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

In the early history of the school two literary societies were organized, which have had a great influence in the growth and development of the school. The Lyceum Society was organized in 1872, and the Mozart Society in 1874. Since that time these societies have been active and have exerted a positive, constructive influence upon the lives of many Normal School students.

Any student of the Normal School is eligible to membership in these societies. They meet regularly each Friday evening. The programs are varied in character, and thus meet the varying abilities of the different students. Vocal and instrumental music, declamations, readings, orations, and debates are given with sufficient frequency to enable the students to get practice and the growth and confidence that comes with practice.

There is a good healthy rivalry between the two societies, which without doubt is an important factor in their activity and vigor. During the commencement season, the annual contest between the two societies is held. This is regarded as the greatest school event of the year, one which fills the spacious auditorium full to overflowing.

ATHLETICS.

Athletics is an important part in the life of the students in the Normal School. The past year has probably been the most successful year in Athletics that the school has had. At the opening of school in September, it was announced that clean athletics would be the rule here, and that no student would be permitted to play who was not a regularly enrolled student, taking full and regular work, and who was not in good standing in his work at the time of the contest. Any school that does not put its athletics on this basis is not just to the principles for which the school ought to stand. Athletics as conducted in many schools is the most immoral feature about them, and any school which bases its standard on the success of its athletic teams, and which constantly certifies incorrectly to the good standing and integrity of the team members, is working a personal injury to the members of the team itself, and to the school as a whole.

Foot ball, basket ball, baseball and track athletics are the fields of athletic activity. Basket ball probably is the most important from the students' standpoint. This is due to the class teams, both boys and girls, and the class contests which take place. A very spirited rivalry exists between the classes, and so the class competitions are as keen as between the regular team and visiting teams.

Athletics properly directed and combined with gymnasium work, may be of great service to students and to the institution. Plans are being developed for giving gymnasium work, for which credit will be given. Learning how to take care of and handle the body is as valuable information as that which is gathered from any other source, so credit should be given for regular work and instruction in the gymnasium the same as for other subjects. Each girl who enters in September should plan to provide herself with a gymnasium suit of dark blue material, so that she can be ready for this work.

MUSIC.

The music work of the Fairmont Normal School is designed to accomplish three purposes. Through study and interpretation of carefully selected music, vocal and instrumental, a love and appreciation for music is developed within the souls of the students. By means of the Victrola, selections from great choruses and operas are studied and used also as the center for the interpretation of the choruses and operas. By the same means, also, the great instrumental and voice selections are produced as interpreted by the world's great performers. This is a very fruitful and efficient method for establishing standards of music and standards of musical interpretation.

Much attention is given to chorus work. This affords opportunity to express the self musically through the best compositions, which very much broadens musical feeling and judgment. So well has this work been done that it can be truthfully said that the students of the Fairmont Normal School enjoy music when interpreted for them, or when they have an opportunity to interpret for themselves.

Dormitory Parlors

Dormitory Dining Room.

In addition to the music work mentioned above, very competent instruction is given in voice training and on the piano. This instruction is not included in the tuition, but is done by personal arrangement with the instructors. The Normal School has several pianos, which are placed at the disposal of students for practice without additional cost.

All students who cannot read music, or who have not studied music, are required to do class work, in which the meaning of musical terms and phrases is carefully explained and much practice given in reading simple music as a preparation for the musical interpretation in the chorus work spoken of above. Regular credit is given for this work, the same as for other subjects in the course.

LECTURES AND ENTERTAINMENTS.

No school in the State has more fine lectures and entertainments than the Fairmont State Normal School. Many of the finest people on the lyceum platform have been heard in Fairmont in the last few years. These lectures and entertainments are a very important feature of the work in this Normal School. As an indication of the courses which are offered, we give the following list of entertainments which appear in the course for the season of 1915-1916.

Frances Ingram, the Famous Contralto of the Chicago Grand Opera Co.

Alton Packard, Celebrated Cartoonist.

Dr. E. A. Ott, one of the ablest lecturers on the American platform.

Weber Male Quartette, of New York, second to none in America.

SOME RULES AND REGULATIONS.

1. Tuition must be paid upon entrance for the semester.
2. Expenses for room and board in the dormitory must be paid at least weekly in advance.

3. Girls living in the dormitory will not be permitted to receive gentlemen callers Sunday evenings, and only twice during the week at hours designated by the President. One evening each week is to be given to the literary societies, and one other for social purposes. Permission will be granted by the Precéptress as to when and how this evening shall be spent, and the place and the company must be satisfactory to her.

4. All students of the Normal School are expected to give five evenings of each week to study. A continued violation of this rule will be considered sufficient ground for expulsion. Young men frequenting pool rooms, and other undesirable places, and engaging in practices inconsistent with the purposes of the Normal School, will be asked to withdraw from the institution.

5. Students who represent the school in any athletic event, or in any society entertainment, must be regularly enrolled students taking at least three subjects, and must be in good standing in at least three subjects. This applies particularly to athletics and debates with other schools and to the annual inter-society contests.

6. Students who do not live in the Dormitory or who do not live at home will be expected to conform to the rules relating to study hours and social life. They must secure permission from the President to attend special social functions or to leave the city.

7. It is important that students away from home should have suitable rooms in which to live. In every case the rooms should be in homes of respectability, and where all things are kept orderly and neat. So far as possible, parents should come with their young people and give personal attention to the selection of the place that will be, in a sense, home for the school year. All students before finally engaging rooms must have them approved by the President or some one designated by him.

TUITION AND EXPENSES.

The tuition in the Normal School is $9.00 per year, one-half to be paid at the opening of each semester. There is also a laboratory fee of 50c. for each semester for those who take chemistry, physics, agriculture, or botany, and for those who take cooking $1.00 per semester. A student body fee of $2.50 a year is required of all students. This covers the expenses for receptions, etc. It also entitles the student to a ticket for all numbers in the regular lecture course. Half of this amount is collected at the beginning of each semester when the tuition is paid. It is felt that no other investment brings larger results than the small amount that is put into good concerts, lectures and entertainments. A class fee of 25 cents for each semester will be collected at the time of paying the tuition. The expenses for books for the year is about $10.00. Other expenses for pencils, paper, etc., will probably amount to $5.00. Board in the dormitory, including meals and room rent, ranges from $3.05 to $3.55, depending upon the location of the room. Girls furnish bedding and towels. Rooms for girls can be obtained near the Normal School and meals taken at the Dormitory, making the entire cost $4.50 per week. Board and rooms can be secured in private homes for about the same amount. Young men can secure rooms for $1.00 to $1.50 per week, and by boarding in clubs can make the entire expense for board per week from $3.50 to $4.00. Board and room at private houses can be secured for about $4.50. Table board at the Dormitory is $3.00 per week.

A REAL NORMAL SCHOOL.

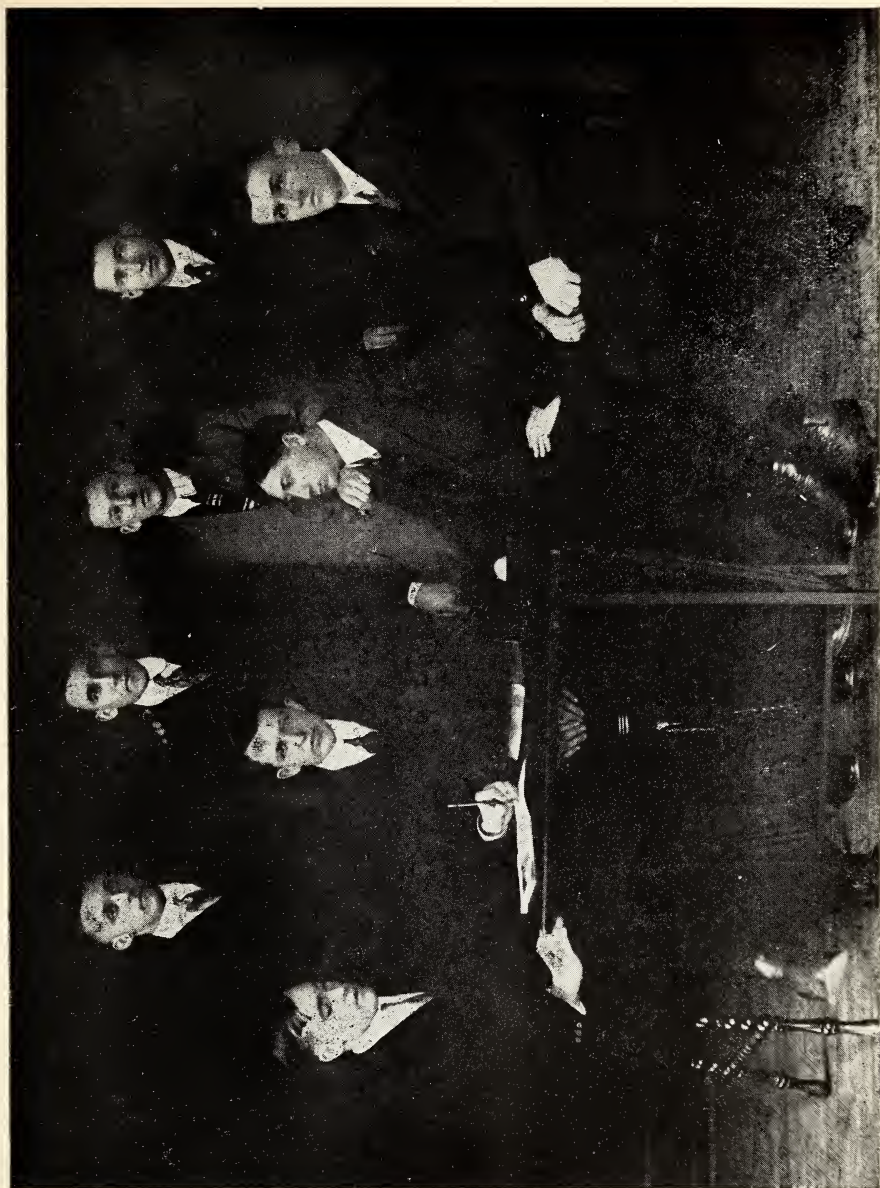

A modern Normal School provides three distinct phases of work:

1. A thorough review of the subjects to be taught in the various schools.
2. Thorough courses in Psychology, Pedagogy, Methods, and School Management.
3. A study of the workings of a school system, with much observation and practice work in a well organized training school.

The Fairmont State Normal School probably meets all of these conditions better than any other school in the State. The Normal work is organized entirely with this idea in mind and every effort is put forth to enable the school to meet completely each of these requirements.

To those who are expecting to teach, we would advise that they attend only those schools that meet these requirements. There are many schools which are organized for another purpose that have added Normal Courses, but they fall short of doing the work of a good normal school, and thus the graduates cannot have the broad view of educational work that should characterize every teacher.

By special arrangements with the Board of Education of the City of Fairmont, the B. L. Butcher School is the Training Department of the Normal School. It consists of eight regular grades, each one under the direction of a carefully selected teacher, and the whole under the general direction of an efficient principal. Each of these teachers becomes the critic teacher of the grade in which she teaches. This fact enables the student to observe good examples of teaching, and later to teach under the guidance of one whom they observed at work. The Training School is under the general charge of a superintendent, assisted by the primary supervisor and a grammar grade supervisor. These three persons and the teachers of the Training School make up the Training School Faculty, and we are certain that it is the most efficient group of educational workers in the State.

COURSE OF STUDY.

The standard American Normal School requires for admission a diploma from a four year high school, and the Normal School course consists of two years in advance of this. In our own State the practice has been to give the normal work in four years of attendance, or in one year after graduation from a four year high school, thus, in fact, making the time of preparation for teachers in the State schools much less than in other States. During the past year some additions to the work have been made in the various schools.

The time seems to have come when the Normal Schools of the State should move forward and require work of equal grade with that done in other states. At the opening of school in September, 1913, the Fairmont State Normal School started with this idea in mind. Students entering for the first time from four year high schools began the two year's course for graduation. Those entering who were graduates of other than four year high schools were given full credit for the work they had done. This move in the State, we believe, will be a very valuable one for the teachers and for the schools in which they teach. The following courses of study went into effect at the opening of school in September. At a joint meeting of the Board of Regents and the Principals of the Normal Schools, the following plan was adopted as the basis for the Normal School work in West Virginia:

1. The Academic work leading to the Normal Course shall consist of four years, and shall be known as the Secondary Course. Sixteen units of work will be required. This course shall be known, in the several years that compose it, as

The Sophomore Secondary
The Junior Secondary
The Senior Secondary

2. The Normal Course shall consist of two years' work in advance of the Secondary Course, and the years of this course shall be known as

The Junior Normal
The Senior Normal.

3. The following were agreed upon as the minimum for the amount of work required in the Secondary Course:

English	4 units
Algebra	1 unit
Geometry	1 unit
History	2 units
Science	2 units
Language	2 units
Manual Arts	1-2 unit
Vocal Music	1-2 unit

The remainder of the 16 units of this course shall be made up by each principal and approved by the Board of Regents.

4. Any student of a first-class four-year High School will be admitted to the Normal Course upon presenting a statement that he has completed 16 units of high school work, and any student of the Secondary course that completes 16 units of work will be admitted to the Normal School courses.

In accordance with the above requirements, the Fairmont Normal School offers the following courses:

Credit will be given in subject on the presentation of evidence, either by certificate or examination in any subject. Graduates of the Secondary Course will be admitted to West Virginia Normal Schools, and the Freshman Class of any College or the University upon certificate of the principal, stating that said four years' course has been satisfactorily completed.

In very special cases the President may make other electives or accept certified work from accredited High Schools in subjects not specified in this course.

Graduates of the Secondary Course will not after 1914 be regarded as Normal School graduates but as graduates of the Secondary department of the Normal School.

The Domestic Science Normal Course is the same as the regular Normal Course, with the exception that in the junior year chemistry of foods, bacteriology, domestic science and art are substituted as electives in place of the academic subjects. In the senior year, domestic science and art is substituted for the academic electives, and a part of the training work will be taken in domestic science or art.

Girl's Basket Ball Squad.

Graduates of four year high schools will be admitted to the Normal Course upon presentation of certificate of work from the Principal. Graduates of other than four year high schools will be given credit in the secondary course for all work which has been certified to by their Principal as being equivalent to that ordinarily done in high schools.

Graduates of the full Normal Course will be eligible to teach in any school in the State. Their diplomas will also be accepted in most other States, as the work done will be that of the standard American Normal School.

Those who complete the full Normal Course will receive University credit for about one and two-third years of work. This will make it possible for a student to graduate at the University within two years of graduation from the Normal, by taking summer school work.

This strengthening of the Normal Course is thus an academic advantage, as well as a professional advantage to those who complete the course, as it also makes the diploma of distinct value, because it represents as much work as is given in any regular Normal School.

Pupils who do not desire to take the Normal Course may take the elective subjects, for which credit will be given that work, will be taken in domestic science or art.

PROFESSIONAL COURSES.

Psychology—One Semester. The aim of this course is to lay the foundation for the scientific study of education, to develop the consciousness of the process and the habit of observing the process, as well as the content of education.

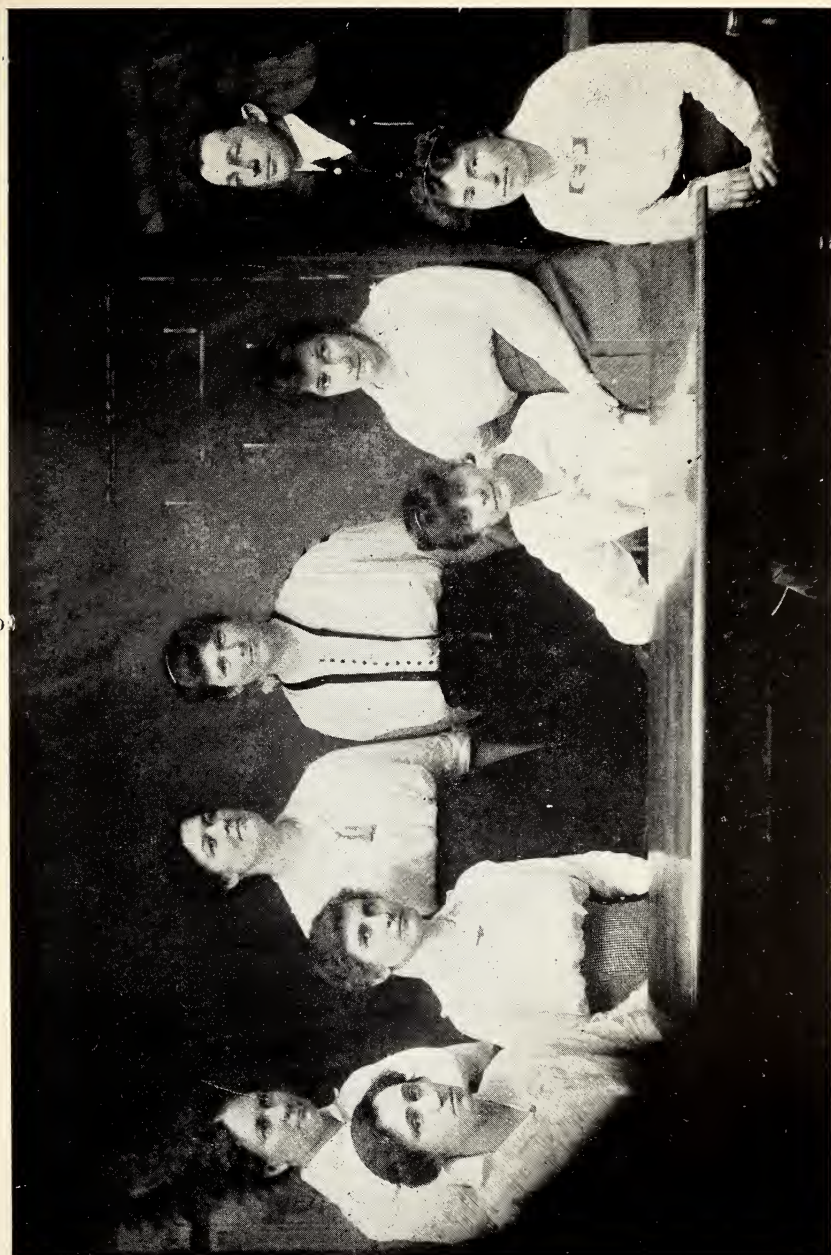

The method is largely inductive at first, beginning with simple introspective and observational problems leading to an appreciation of the fact that the subject matter of psychology is to be found in the mental processes of the teacher and the pupil. This is followed by a more systematic study of reflex, instinctive and conscious behavior.

General Method—One Semester. This course is intended to present the general principles underlying the teaching process. It is fundamental for all the courses in special method and practice in that it formulates the general principles upon which are based the selection of materials and the methods of presentation. The leading topics are: (1) the meaning and aims of education; (2) the materials of education—a study of the child, his instincts, tendencies, possibilities, perception, attention, and motivation; (3) the forms of instruction; development, drill, appreciation; (4) the use of the lesson plan; (5) the hygiene of instruction; (6) the evolution and function of subject matter; (7) testing results. This course is accompanied by the observation of actual school activities in connection with each subject treated.

History of Education—One year, two periods per week. The aim of this course is to lead the student to an understanding of present educational ideals, principles, problems, and practices; to lead to an appréciation of the dignity of the profession; and to develop a perspective which will give stability and poise in the midst of extreme opinions and fads. To this end the emphasis is placed upon principles and practices rather than upon men, and these principles and practices are studied in the light of their social setting. A brief study is made of primitive education to show its simplest beginnings, then follows a study of Greek and Roman education. The Mediaeval period receives some attention, but the greater part of the time is devoted to the modern period.

Principles of Education—One year, two periods per week. This course is synthetic, gathering up and attempting to formulate the principles underlying the science of education. The most important principles which biology, physiology, psychology, and sociology have contributed to the science of education will be considered and their application to educational problems indicated. The following are some of the topics to be considered: The significance of evolution for education; the aims of education; the evolution of the curriculum and the principles which should underlie the selection of subject matter; the principles underlying the learning process; the maturing of the nervous system, physical growth and development, fatigue, and their bearing on educational problems; principles of moral education. There will be no special text used in this course but extensive library work will be required.

School Administration—One Semester. The first four weeks will be devoted to a consideration of school room management; then will follow a discussion of some of the larger problems as follows: Classification and promotion of pupils, the relation of the school to the home and to the community, the improvement of teachers in practice, the ethics of school craft, special schools for defective and delinquents, open air schools, the organization of industrial education, sanitary conditions, medical inspection of schools, sources of materials, etc. This course consists of lectures, reports, and discussions.

Elementary Methods—This course is given only in the spring term and is especially suited to the needs of those students who have been teaching or expect to teach the next year, and have not the courses in psychology, child study, history of education, and principles of teaching. It is the aim of the course to give a few primary laws of learning and of teaching, some fundamental principles of school organization and of school management, and some of the essentials of the recitation and of study.

Teachers' Course in Public School Subjects. Five Periods Per Week Throughout Two Years.—The purpose of this course is to familiarize students with the aims of the curriculum, with the subject matter and the best methods of organization and presentation. Each subject is considered with reference to its development and its place in the curriculum. A suggestive course of study is worked out. Selected portions of subject matter are worked out in great detail and organized with reference to particular grades. In this way students are made familiar with the sources of materials and drilled in the habit of thinking of subject matter always with reference to its function in the education of the child. In the drill subjects students are encouraged to form the habit of imitating means and devices to meet the shifting attention of children in the development of speed and accuracy.

The following courses are offered. Each course will be given in two sections, one for the primary grades and one for the grammar grades.

1. Nature study and geography.
2. Hygiene and sanitation.
3. Reading, language, and literature.
4. Number and arithmetic.
5. History and civics.

Training School—The Training School furnishes an opportunity for students to observe the application of the principles of psychology, and of general and special method as they are acquiring these principles in the theoretical courses, and later on to apply their knowledge of these principles in actual practice, thus testing their knowledge and acquiring skill.

The Training School consists of the eight grades below the high school. There is a critic teacher in every room and there are two supervisors. Every Normal School student, before graduation, is required to spend one hour each day for at least eighteen weeks in the Training School beyond the required work in observation during the junior year. More practice will be required if the student seems to need it. Before taking practice, the student must have completed the course in psychology and in General Method. Pupil teachers will be expected to help in the opening exercises and in the mechanics of the school room and playground. Each student teacher will teach at least two subjects, and his practice will be distributed so as to include at least two grades. The assignments of grades are made after a careful study of individual adaptability. As far as possible, the students' preferences will be considered in the assignment of subjects. An outline of the work to be done, together with general instructions as to management and responsibilities will be given each student before he begins his work.

The most thorough academic and pedagogical preparation is required for every lesson taught. Written lesson plans are required during the early part of the work, and these are criticised by a critic teacher and re-constructed by the student before he may teach. Later on reports of lessons are written and the student is asked to criticise his own work in the light of pedagogical principles in order to develop in him the habit of conscious self-improvement. All of the work is under the direct supervision of the critic or supervisor. The hour from three-thirty to four-thirty of every school day, not including Friday, will be reserved for informal critic meetings. During this hour, students may be called and any student can arrange for a personal meeting with critic or supervisor.

HISTORY COURSES.

Secondary Course in History.

European History—Part I—This course is the first half of a two year course in European history. In part I the oriental background of history is briefly surveyed and the development of Europe is followed through the ancient and medieval periods. By omitting many of the comparatively unimportant details of their political history the time usually devoted to Greece and Rome is considerably shortened without excluding the student entirely from a knowledge of the achievements and the institutions of the famous peoples of antiquity. One year, five periods a week. An elective course, open only to first and second year students in the academic course.

European History—Part II—This course continues the story of the development of Europe down to the present time. The time allotted by this course to the Modern Period permits an adequate treatment of many phases of modern history ordinarily slighted in secondary history courses. Upon completing Parts I and II of European history the student should have some definite and correct ideas concerning the main features of the world in which he lives and about how this world came to be the world that it is. One year, five hours a week. A required course for academic students. It should be taken in the second or third year.

United States History and Civics.—This course devotes approximately three periods a week to a survey of the chief movements and fundamental facts of American history and approximately two periods a week to a study of the structure and working of American political institutions. A required course for students in the academic course. It should be taken in the third or fourth year. One year, five periods a week.

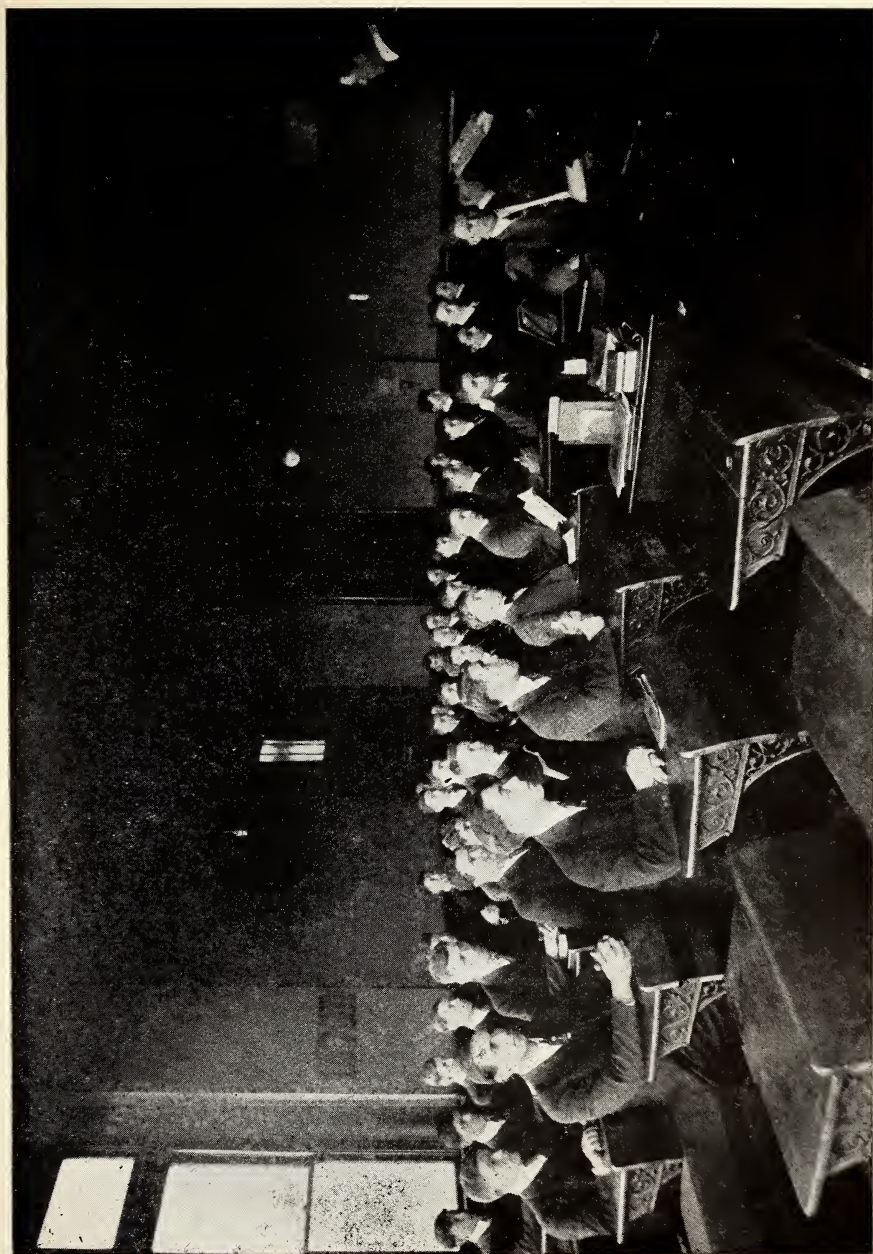

English History.—A general survey of English history. The structure and working of the Imperial government, the growth of the British Empire, and the commercial and industrial development of England will receive more than usual attention. An elective course, given only when there is a sufficient demand for such a course.

Normal Courses in History.

Modern Europe.—This course aims to explain the present situation of the peoples of European origin. The main movements of European politics are followed and more than usual attention is given to such phases as intellectual history, the commercial and industrial revolutions, the socialist and humanitarian movements, and the expansion of Europe across the seas. Open only to students who have completed the equivalent of a four years course in high school and who are capable of doing advanced work in history. One year, four hours a week.

United States History.—The character and scope of the work in this course will be announced later. Either a limited period or a particular phase of United States history will be studied. Open only to students who have completed the equivalent of a four years high school course and who are capable of doing advanced work in history.

All history courses will be based on text-book work as a foundation but in all courses some reference work, reports and map drawing will be required in addition to the text-book work. The amount and character of this outside work will vary in amount and character with the grade of the work. In the Normal courses in history such exercises will constitute the most important part of the required work.

MATHEMATICS COURSES.

Arithmetic—In Arithmetic the work at first consists of a review of definitions and the fundamental processes to discover the principles involved in and derived from these processes. Thoroughness in elementary processes and principles is insisted upon. The subsequent work is so arranged as to show the unity of the subject—to show that, though the terms used and the processes may vary, the underlying principles are all the same. Most of the students are to become teachers and this work is intended to help them in their teaching and to give foundation for their study of the best methods of presenting the subject.

Algebra—In Algebra special attention is at first given to the elementary processes and principles, and the application of these to the solution of simple problems by means of the equation, definitions being given as needed. Much attention is given to factoring—emphasis being placed upon a few distinct types—the basis upon which the greatest part of Algebra is built. In connection with simultaneous linear equation the graph is introduced, special attention being given to two methods of elimination. Quadratic equations are introduced through factoring. This is followed by the completion of the square, the outcome of which is the formula derived from the general quadratic equation—a formula so important that it should be fixed in the mind for use in the subsequent part of the subject. The logic of elementary Algebra is studied in connection with equivalent equation and extraneous roots. The year's work includes also a study of the theory of exponents and radical.

Plane Geometry—The work in geometry is begun by requiring the student to observe and construct the elementary geometric forms, and in this connection to learn the definitions. A clear conception of these is essential to an understanding of geometry, as they form the basis of the subject. One of the chief objects of the study of geometry is to cultivate the habit of close observation, of comparison, of exact logical thinking, and of clear, accurate expression. To secure all this, the theorems in the text are used, after which many exercises are furnished to test the student's ability to apply the principles learned from the demonstration. One year is given to plane geometry. Solid geometry may be elected.

Trigonometry—In this course the trigonometric functions are first defined and learned as ratios, but representation by lines is also introduced at the beginning, since some parts of the subject can be treated more simply by the line method, or by a combination of the two, than by the ratio subject, the ideas and requirements of modern mathematics method alone. In dealing with the fundamental series of the are recognized, and the design for equipping the student for more advanced work in a college course is kept in mind. The elementary formulas are studied in groups and proved, and from these other important formulas are derived, special emphasis to those essential to the solution of triangles. Application of these is given in a large number of exercises.

Solid Geometry—In solid geometry methods are used similar to those employed in plane geometry, as pupils were at first taught to see figures in one plane, so now they must be taught to visualize solids from a flat drawing. In considering the propositions in solid geometry, constant reference is made to corresponding propositions in plane geometry. This adds interest to the subject by keeping the familiar connected with what is strange and creates some approach to power in the discovery of new facts in relation to figures of three dimensions.

BIOLOGICAL SCIENCE.

Biology—This work begins with a microscopic study of unicellular life, a special study of the morphology and physiology of the cell. The characteristic differences of animal and plant life are shown, and a brief survey is made of the evolutionary development of organisms into higher forms. Some attention is given to economic entomology. The work is intended to vitalize the subject of biology and open the eyes and mind of the student to the relationship of organic life met in his environment.

Botany. Class, Laboratory, and Field Work—This course is designed to especially fit the student to take up the subject of agriculture and to help him in nature study work. A brief review is given of the life and processes of the lower plant life from an economic standpoint. Detailed microscopic studies of plant tissues are made and a general knowledge of structure, feeding habits and effect of environment is given. Enough work is done in systematic botany to acquaint the student with the characteristics of the more common families of plants.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Physiology and Hygiene—This course aims to give to teachers up-to-date scientific ideas both as regards subject matter and methods of teaching. Special effort is made to present this subject attractively and to lay emphasis upon aspects of the subject most worth while. Anatomy is taught only as a means toward teaching the more practical and interesting knowledge of physiological processes and their application to hygiene.

Lecture demonstrations and a few individual laboratory experiments are given.

AGRICULTURE.

Elementary Agriculture—This course is especially designed for the country teacher and the beginner in Agriculture. The active practical work of agriculture is carried on with the theoretical work. By means of field trips, laboratory work and readings, a study of the formation and value of the various soils is made and the best methods of improvement and care are given. The elementary principles of seed selection, planting, cultivation, etc., are carried out in a practical way. Attention is given to animal husbandry, dairying, and practical farm management.

Advanced Agriculture—This work is designed more especially for the student who finishes the Normal Course and is preparing for college work. Botany and Chemistry are prerequisites. The real problems of the West Virginia farmer are taken up in the most practical way. Seed selection, testing, harvesting and storing of grains and forage crops, feeding and care of farm animals, and the ordinary practical principles of dairying are features of the work. The care and value of manures, use of fertilizers, soil studies and preparation, planting and care of the orchard are made clear by actual demonstration. Special emphasis is given to the nature and control of the common pests and diseases of farm crops. Four class periods and five hours of laboratory each week are required. Some good text is taken as a basis, but constant use is made of government bulletins, farm journals, and other related reading matter.

PHYSICAL SCIENCE.

Physical Geography—This subject is presented under the sub-heads of the earth as a planet, the land, the sea; the atmosphere, life, and the relation of Physical Geography to other subjects, as Physics, Astronomy, History, Geology, Agriculture, Forestry, Botany, etc.

Besides the use of a text, there are required readings and reports. Excursions are made and much emphasis is placed on first-hand knowledge. There is no other subject that has a more wholesome, broadening effect than Physical Geography.

Elementary General Physics—This subject continues throughout the year. It consists of the usual divisions: Mechanics of liquids, solids, and gases; Heat, Electricity,

Johnson Story-Telling Club.

Sound and Light. Numerous class-room demonstrations are given, and an enthusiastic interest is maintained. Individual laboratory work is made a strong feature of the course. The phenomena of physics are met with on every hand in our every day lives, and though often direct and simple, are comparatively little thought about or understood by people who have no training in physics. This course is a great aid in the interpretation of the physical forces about us. The educational value of this study is very great. Recitations four hours a week; laboratory work two hours a week.

Elementary General Chemistry—This course extends throughout the school year. It is accompanied by a large amount of laboratory work, giving the student first hand knowledge of materials and chemical reactions upon which the theoretical work of the class-room is based. Chemistry touches life on every side but unless a good foundation is laid it will not be very useful. Just enough theory, therefore, is taught to give unity and usefulness to the body of facts presented. We especially emphasize applications of chemistry to explanations of phenomena of physiology and hygiene, domestic arts, agriculture, and the industries of our own State.

Household Chemistry, with Physical Introduction—This course is open only to students who have had a year of general chemistry. Many important fundamental principles of physics which pertain to domestic arts are introduced, such as thermometry, heat measurements, domestic uses of electricity, heating, ventilating, illuminating, etc. Much of the course will be devoted to the chemistry of food and nutrition, cleansing and purifying processes, water and sanitation, detection of harmful adulterants and preservatives, generalizations regarding use of antiseptics, use of antiseptics and disinfectants. The chemistry of paints, oils, dyes, soaps, textiles, etc., will be treated in a practical and scientific manner. This course will be accompanied by considerable individual laboratory work.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE COURSES.

Foods I and II—A course in the selection and preparation of food. Typical foods are studied, and the ideas gained in the discussion of their sources, properties, uses and preparation are impressed upon the minds of the pupils by practical work. Thoughtful spending is encouraged when food value and cost are compared, special attention being paid to making the simple, inexpensive foods attractive and nourishing.

Foods III—One semester's credit. A few weeks in the beginning will be devoted to the subject of fruit and vegetable preservation. Some advanced work in regular cooking problems will be given, with attention paid to the calorific value of foods, invalid cookery, and some general work in diatetics.

Household Management—One-half unit credit. This course will take up such problems of home life as division of income, care of household linen, kitchen furnishings, household accounts, general laundry principles, and such others as time will permit.

Observation and Teaching—The observation and teaching work in this course will be in domestic science. The second term of special methods will take up the planning of courses of study for domestic science work in the grades.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE COURSE.

FRENCH—First Year.—Grammar, reading, and constant practice in pronunciation and conversation. Stress is laid upon the pronoun and verb. Cardenal's Complete French Course, and Aldrich and Foster's French Grammar.

Second Year—Advanced grammar, composition, translation, and dictation. Chardenal's Advanced French Course; Lamartine's Graziella; George Sand's La Petite Fadette; Merimee's Colomba; Dumas' La Tulipe Noire.

Third Year—History of the Classical Period of the Seventeenth Century. Selected works from Descartes, Pascal, Corneille, Racine, LaFontaine and Moliere.

GERMAN—First Year.—Pronunciation, grammar, reading of short stories, elementary composition, and conversation. Vos Essentials of German, or Fraser and Von der Smissen's Grammar; Super's Reader; Ein Sommer in Deutschland; Immensee; Hoher als die Kirche.

Second Year—Rapid reading of German prose and poetry; translation of English prose into German; discussion of grammatical points in connection with the translation; study of irregular verbs; dictation; composition; Der Neffe als Onkel; Die Journalisten; Willhelm Tell; Hermann und Dorothea; Minna von Barnhelm; Bacon's Prose Composition.

Third Year—History of German Literature, and study of the biographies of the classical authors. Selected works of Goethe, Lessing, Schiller, Kleist.

Latin—Recognizing that the study of Latin by those who are preparing to teach is important, the relation of Latin to English is held in mind; similarities in construction are noted and attention given to the derivation of English words from Latin roots. The first year is spent in drills in pronunciation, quantity, accent, the study of forms, vocabulary, and constructions. In nearly every lesson exercises in translating English into Latin and Latin into English are given. These exercises lead to a mastery of forms and principles that make the study of Ceasar a neasy task.

The second year's work is given to the mastery of Caesar, the third to Cicero, and the fourth to Virgil. Other classics may be substituted for parts of the authors named.

The aim of the study of Latin should be the acquirement both of intrinsic and of disciplinary values, and this twofold aim is held constantly in mind.

ENGLISH COURSES.

The general aims of the course in English are three; to study a number of prose and poetic masterpieces of English and American authors, with the aim of introducing the student to representative literature, in training him in critical and appreciative powers, and assisting him in forming proper reading habits; to train the student in writing and speaking clear, natural, idiomatic English in the elementary schools. The course consists of six years' work, which is divided into two divisions: Secondary and Normal.

First Year—The specific aim of this year's work is to give the students grounding in literature and writing and speaking. The literature read will consist of myths, fables, fairy stories, and other kinds of "foundation literature," both in prose and poetry. There is much reading aloud in class. Each student is required to read one book on the outside each month, and to make an oral report to the teacher. The work in language consists of written and oral paragraphs and compositions in Narration and Exposition, in connection with the study of a text. The formal elements in speaking and writing are emphasized during the year. Spelling is taught through the composition work done and by means of definite drills. Students have frequent private conferences with their teacher.

Second Year—The basis of this year's work is practical prose Rhetoric. The work consists of study of a text, once a week; of composition work, twice a week; literature, twice a week. In Rhetoric work is made practical, the emphasis being placed on the fundamental qualities of good writing and speaking; outlining, working up material, paragraphing, unity and coherence, and ease and expressiveness. The Composition work consists of both oral and written composing. It correlates closely with the work in Rhetoric. All four forms of discourse are taken up, and letter-writing is carried on throughout the year. The literature for the year is a study of Prose Types—the short story, the novel and the essay—which are correlated with the Rhetoric and Composition work. Each student is required to read assigned literature on the outside and make oral reports to the teacher. Some newspapers and current magazines are discussed.

Third Year—The basis of this year's work is literature; the study of Poetic Types—the Epic, the Lyric, the Drama.

The rhetoric of poetry is closely studied, to the end that the student may have bases for his appreciation. Some of the poetry in current magazines is read and criticized, and the drama is studied in the local theaters. Expositions, either written or oral, are required once a week or oftener, usually on subjects drawn from the work in literature. Letter-writing, with special emphasis on the Familiar Letter, is made a part of the year's work. Book reviews and long topics on assigned topics are required at the pleasure of the teacher.

Fourth Year—The work of this year consists of the study of literature by periods. Some of the great literature—both prose and poetry—of the historical periods in English and American literature is read—some of it closely, some of it rapidly. The aim of this work is to familiarize the student with the leading characteristics of the different writers and periods, by reading the literature. The teacher supplements this by lectures and discussions, and by assigning topics for special study. These assigned topics make up the composition work of the year. No text in History of Literature is studied; the students are expected to compile one by means of their reading, study of special topics, and the teacher's lectures.

NORMAL COURSES IN ENGLISH.

Junior Year—Two courses are offered throughout the year. The first consists of Advanced Grammar and Advanced Composition. In the advanced grammar, a history of the English language and the science of grammar is studied, with the aim of making the student acquainted with the growth of the language through the different periods, and the English grammar as the logical and scientific basis of thought. The composition work consists of both oral and written composing. The oral compositions consists of experience. The written work consists in the writing and debates and expositions on subjects drawn from life and discussion of short stories and letters. Personal conferences between student and teacher are held.

The other course is based upon a study of English prose fiction, the contemporary realistic novel serving as a starting point. The aim is to lead the student to judge these novels, first of all, as studies of such social conditions as they themselves know. The study proceeds from the later novelists to those of earlier periods. Methods of portraying character, elements of plot structure, the significance of setting, and qualities of style, are brought to the student's attention by contrast and comparison. A representative novel of each of the following authors is read and discussed somewhat in detail: Howells, Hardy, Meredith, Stevenson, George Eliot, Thackeray, Mrs. Gaskell, Dickens, Hawthorne, Scott, Jane Austin, and Goldsmith. Frequent reference is made to critical essays, especially those in which novelists have given their own theories of their art. The work in composition is directed chiefly toward increasing the student's appreciation of literary values.

Senior Year—Two courses are offered throughout the year. The first consists of a study of the principles and practice of teaching English in the elementary school. Reading, literature spelling, grammar, language, and composition work are all taken up, together with story telling and dramatization. The students put into practice the theories advanced by teaching classes in the model school. The sole aim of the course is to fit the students to become good teachers of English in the elementary schools.

The other course consists of the close study of two authors, the ones for 1914-15 being Tennyson and Carlyle. The work consists of much reading from the authors, lectures on their lives and characteristics, discussions, and reports on assigned readings. The emphasis is put upon the authors as interpreters and moulders of modern thought, upon the qualities of their art, and upon the social and cultural values of their work.

DRAWING AND DOMESTIC ART.

Drawing. Two hours a week throughout the year, is based upon the text, High School Art Education.

The course outlined is as follows: Composition, line, mass, light and shade, pose, perspective, geometric drawing, design, historic art and ornament, modern artists.

Design. The course in design takes up the various sources of motifs and decorative coloring, making application in household decoration, as pottery, wall paper, china, cushions, draperies, tile, etc. This course is preparatory to the work in household arts.

Household Arts. Two periods a week during the second semester of the junior year. The course includes home plans and decoration, furnishings, styles of furniture, tapestries, linens, porcelains, pictures. The aim of the course is to enable the student to make the best economic and artistic selection from the familiarity with as many commercial articles as possible. The merchants co-operate with us in showing lines of goods, and manufacturers give information concerning the method of manufacture, sources of materials, etc.

Sewing. Two hours a week throughout the year. This course will be offered to students of both secondary and normal courses. It will take up the various stitches in plain sewing, muslin work, and the adaptation of commercial patterns. It is especially planned for beginners in this art.

Special Methods. This work will consist in the making of models in sewing for use in the teaching of sewing in the grades. Each article will be approached from the teaching standpoint, and its value in the development of a child. The second semester of this work will continue, with the Course of Study definitely outlined prepared for the observation and teaching.

THE SHORT COURSE.

E. L. Lively, Director.

The educational leaders of the State, feeling the need of a course of study to better suit the needs of a great mass of teachers who are trying to teach and at the same time improve themselves in efficiency and scholarship, submitted to and secured the passage of the following law by the recent Legislature:

"The State Superintendent shall have authority upon application in due form to issue the Short Course teachers' certificate, valid for a period of three years to those who have completed the Short Course in the State Normal School, and its branches, the Short Course in the West Virginia Collegiate Institute, the Normal Training Course in high schools that have been approved by the State Board of Education, and to those who have completed in other schools of the State a course of study, that in the judgment of the State Board of Education, is equivalent in all respects to the Short Course offered in the State Normal School, and its branches.

"Such Short Course certificates shall be valid in all the grades of the elementary schools of the State, and in the payment of salaries shall be considered as first grade certificates.

"Any Short Course certificate shall be renewable for one period of three years, provided that the holder thereof has taught for two years thereon, or has done two years credit work in an approved high school or standard normal school, or other school approved by the State Board of Education within the life of said certificate."

The law in regard to the Short Course, as well as the course of study itself, is tentative and can be made to suit the needs of the schools giving the Short Course, and to meet new conditions that may arise. By the general provisions of the law, the State Board of Regents determines all courses for the State Normal Schools, and it will fix the requirements of this course from time to time. The State Board of Education determines what this course shall be in the normal training high schools, and in private institutions wishing to offer it.

Schwartz

Camp Fire Girls.

The State Board of Education, at a recent meeting, fixed the following general requirements for the Short Course in the Normal training high schools. The State Board of Regents has agreed that the same requirements should be the basis for the Short Course in the State Normal Schools. Persons with only elementary education, and without experience, will be required to take the entire course as outlined. Others will be given special credit under the regulations for substitutes.

The Fairmont Normal School is pleased to offer the advantages of this Short Course to all worthy and progressive young men and women who wish to make it their choice, and will carry out the same high standards of ideals and scholarship in this course that characterizes the work of this school in general. The Fairmont Normal has made itself a leader, not by knocking, but by persistent unselfish growth in efficiency.

The Short Course as offered by the Fairmont Normal School is especially well adapted to the needs of mature students and teachers in service, and for that reason each student will be dealt with according to his individual needs and merits. Let it be distinctly understood, however, that this is not to be "a cheap course". Every precaution will be taken to prevent incompetent superficial students from receiving the benefits of this course, and under no circumstances will this first grade certificate be given to any one who is not worthy of this high honor, and the privileges that go with it. The Short Course is not intended as a substitute for the regular Normal diploma course, but is made to serve a special purpose and to enable a greater number of teachers to secure better training for their work while climbing to something higher. The completion of the standard Normal Course should be the aim of every progressive teacher.

For any further information in regard to the Short Course, write to the President of the Normal School or E. L. Lively, Director of the Short Course.

Explanations and Substitutes to be Allowed in the Short Course—Persons expecting to ask for special credit should write to the President of the Normal School, or to the Director of the Short Course for full particulars before taking up special work. Credits accepted by one Normal School, or other approved schools, may be transferred to another school. Thirty-six weeks are considered a school year and many of the subjects are so divided that students who cannot go to school regularly may get credit for eighteen weeks and twelve weeks. Subjects will be offered in the summer terms of six to nine weeks. In this way ample provision is made for those who wish to teach and go to school to work in this course in spring and summer terms. In this school the term "Unit" is used in counting credits, and one unit is the credit earned by taking one subject five full recitations each week for the entire school year. The term "Credit" is used in counting work done and represents one subject five full recitations each week for a period of twelve weeks.

Except in extreme cases, all students are required to spend at least one full year in the Normal School before receiving the certificate. This requirement is necessary in order to give students a chance to take the professional work.

Work in Other Schools—Two years of approved work in a classified high school or other school of equal rank will count for about one-half of the Short Course or an equivalent of 228 weeks in one subject. A third year of such work may be substituted, if the subjects and work are approved by the Normal School where credit is asked. Students are asked to take the first two years in a high school, if one is in reach of their homes. Before taking the third year in a local school, the student who expects to finish the Short Course in a normal school and get his high school course approved in advance. Irregular work in other schools may count for some credit.

Grade on State Uniform Examinations—A credit of 24 weeks in the Short Course will be given for each of the following subjects, provided the student has made as much as 80% on the subject for a certificate in the State Uniform Examinations, viz: grammar, reading, history, arithmetic, theory and art, agriculture, and geography. 12 weeks credit will be allowed on the following subjects: spelling, bookkeeping, general history, civil government, State history, and physiology. The applicant may be required to pass a satisfactory oral or written examination on these subjects. Not more than 162 weeks credit can be allowed in this way, and those in charge of the course will decide for what subjects substitutions may be made.

Credit for Experience—In addition to the above credits, nine weeks of credit on one subject will be allowed for successful term of school, taught by the person taking the course. Not more than 72 weeks credit can be allowed for experience. Those expecting to ask for credit for teaching must be prepared to give evidence that the teaching is successful. The President of the Normal School will act as judge as to the value of such experience.

Satisfactory Work in Extension or Home Classes Under an Approved Instructor—Under regulations approved by the State Board of Regents and the Normal School. Groups of students not attending school may do organized work under an instructor sent out or approved by the Normal School, and secure credit for such work on entering the Normal School.

Correspondence Courses—A limited number of credits may be earned under authorized instructors offering such courses.

Entrance Examinations—Students may satisfy some requirements by passing satisfactorily rigid entrance examinations on certain subjects.

The President of the School and Director of the Short Course hold it as their right to interpret the above plans for credit work, and will favor the worthy in every reasonable way, and will try to avoid giving any special advantages to those who do not prove themselves wholly worthy.

DEPARTMENT OF EXTENSION WORK.

WALTER BARNES, Director.

In pursuance of a policy to extend the usefulness and service of the Normal School, plans are being made for the direction and supervision of work outside of school, in local classes and in correspondence study. Many ambitious and earnest young men and women who desire to improve themselves in scholarship and in professional training are not able to attend the Normal School for long periods. It is the purpose of this department to so organize the work of these persons that they may continue their advancement while engaged in the work of teaching. By carrying on work in their home communities under the direction of the Normal School authorities, and by attending the Normal School during the spring and summer terms, such young people can complete the Normal Course.

This work may be carried on in two ways. First, members of the faculty will be able to conduct a limited number of weekly or monthly classes in localities within convenient reach of Fairmont. Second, classes may be organized in different localities to be conducted by teachers in the local schools who have been approved by the President of the Normal School. Arrangements will also be made for the organization of the reading circle work on the same basis, so that those so desiring may secure credit for such courses.

The President and different members of the faculty of the Normal School will, as far as possible, give their services in district institute work and in educational meetings within the territory of the school. It is the desire of the Normal School faculty to render genuine service to the public schools of the State.

It should be understood that the work done under the supervision of this department must be thorough in its character, and it must be carried on in a systematic manner.

While the aim is to extend the service of the Normal School to young men and women outside of school in the direction of their studies, it is not the intention to encourage in any way superficial work. The Normal School stands ready to accept all work done outside of school under the auspices of this department, provided that work has been done in such a manner as to merit approval.

Superintendents and principals desiring further information concerning the organization of local classes and the plans by which such work may be done so as to secure recognition for credit in the Normal School courses, should address the President, or the Director of this department.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EXPRESSION

BEATRICE FITZWATER, Director.

The end and aim of all our work is the harmonious growth of the whole being.—Froebal.

The courses offered in this department are based upon those of The Greely School of Elocution and Dramatic Art. The aim of the department is to develop the student's individuality by stimulating the imagination, quickening the sympathies and unfolding the powers of expression.

Such a program of courses, while of benefit to the average student of dramatic art, should be especially helpful to those preparing to teach. It is evident that the teacher who can interpret the beauties of literature attractively and who can recite a dramatic story in a way to captivate and hold the child's interest has at hand an effective means of leadership.

The courses include:

Voice training,	Impromptu speaking,
Physical expression,	Literary interpretation,
Oral reading,	Impersonation,
Adaptation of stories,	Public appearances.

It is planned that each student in the school shall come in touch with this department at some time during the year.

Besides the classes open to all students. (See course in English Interpretation) private instruction may be had at the following rates:

Fees are payable at the beginning of each term.

No deduction will be made for lessons missed except in cases of protracted illness. Missed lessons will be made up whenever possible.

The rates of tuition in this department are as follows:

Fall Term,	2 half hour lesons per week, $14.00
Winter Term,	2 half hour lessons per week, 10.00
Spring Term,	2 half hour lessons per week, 10.00

DIRECTIONS TO STUDENTS.

Young persons desiring to enter the Normal School should make a careful study of the Normal School catalogue, noting particularly the different advantages of attending school at Fairmont, and considering carefully the various courses of study offered. Should questions arise concerning matters of credit for school work already done, the prospective student should write to the President of the Normal School indicating the amount of work which has been done, and the schools that have been attended. When the student has decided to come to the Normal School, he should make inquiry at the nearest railroad station concerning railroad time tables, and the connections which must be made in order to reach Fairmont.

After reaching Fairmont, students who are not acquainted in the City should come directly to the Normal School building, and report to the office. They are especially reminded that they should make no arrangements about rooms or boarding places until such places have been approved by the Normal School authorities.

Non-resident young women will take rooms and boarding in the dormitory until it has been filled, and then they will be assigned to approved rooming places in the same locality, with arrangements for taking their meals in the dormitory dining room. Young men desiring to organize boarding clubs are requested to confer with the President of the Normal School in planning for the rooming and boarding of young men students.

It is the plan of the Normal School authorities to make the living arrangements of students as convenient and economical as possible.
